CRITICAL CABINET DEBATE HAMMERS OUT AMENDMENTS

Languages Bill Modified for West

By ANTHONY WESTELL

OTTAWA — The cabinet has agreed to modify the Official Languages Bill to try to meet objections from western Canada. Amendments to be introduced when the legislation goes to the Commons committee for detailed study, probably next week, are expected to include:

Westell

● A guarantee that general ability, and not command of the French language, will continue to be the qualification for jobs in the federal public service.

● A provision limiting the use of French in magistrates' courts and other criminal courts administered by the provinces.

It is not yet known if these and other concessions will be sufficient to dissuade the prairie provinces from asking the Supreme Court of Canada to rule that the languages act would be unconstitutional.

But the changes in the bill should certainly ease political pressures for both the cabinet and the Conservative opposition.

The cabinet was threatened by a serious division when Secretary of State Gerard Pelletier, who will administer the languages act when it is law, resisted changes in the bill advocated by Justice Minister John Turner.

There was a critical period when Turner might easily have refused to take responsibility for the bill in the Commons because it was not satisfactory. But this split was averted by a compromise after a tough debate last week.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield is wholly committed to the principle of the bill, which is to guarantee equal treatment for the two official languages within the federal jurisdiction across Canada. But about 20 of his backbench supporters, mainly from rural western Canada, have been equally strongly opposed — claiming to reflect grassroots feelings in their ridings.

The danger of a deep division in the Tory ranks on this fundamental issue of national policy has been apparent for several weeks.

It intensified recently when John Diefenbaker emerged as a public critic of the government bill, challenging Stanfield's policy and providing an alternative leadership for the western rebels in the parliamentary caucus.

If the amendments to the bill succeed in quietening the west's fears, they should also pacify the Tory critics in Ottawa and make it easier for the party to present a united front in the Commons.

Prime Minister Trudeau sent copies of the bill to provincial premiers last October. At the same time, Justice Minister Turner circulated the draft legislation to provincial attorneys-general.

This did not prevent public misunderstanding of the federal policy, particularly on the prairies. Many westerners were led to believe that inability to speak French — and the absence of a French cultural background to assist them to learn the language — would put them at a prohibitive disadvantage in seeking jobs in a bilingual civil service, in the armed forces and in federal corporations such as Air Canada.

This fear ignores the fact that the public service has been committed to a policy of bilingualism for several years, during which there has been a marked increase, rather than a decline, in hiring of English-speaking Canadians.

It ignores also the new techniques of language teaching being used in the federal service, which make the learning of French a stimulating experience rather than a hopeless chore, as it might have been for many in their schooldays.

But these reassurances can be underlined, without in any way changing the principle of the bill, by providing a positive guarantee that lack of French — or lack of English for a French-speaking candidate — will not be a bar to employment in the federal service.

The concern of the western governments that the bill may be unconstitutional has grown mainly from a clause providing for use of French — or English in French-speaking areas — in criminal courts.

The federal government claims the right to legislate for criminal courts because the Criminal Code is under its jurisdiction. Some provincial governments argue this is an unconstitutional invasion of their rights because administration of the law is their responsibility.

In practice, the provincial critics fear a situation in which they would have to provide bilingual magistrates, judges and court services at great trouble and expense to satisfy only a theoretical need.

As it stands, the bill hardly justifies such fears. It is merely permissive, providing that an accused can specify in which of the official languages he wants his case to be heard, and the court can agree if it appears that the proceedings can be conducted effectively in that language.

In other words, the magistrate or judge has discretion in deciding which language is to be used.

But the cabinet has agreed to introduce even more flexibility into this clause. One amendment being considered would say that bilingual courts would operate only in districts officially declared to be bilingual — that is, in a district in which at least 10 per cent of the population have a mother tongue (French or English) other than that of the majority.

While these and other changes in the bill under discussion are obviously not of major importance in them-

'War Outbreak Unavoidable'

TEL AVIV (AP)—An Israeli cabinet minister said Tuesday night that war with Egypt is unavoidable and will break out as soon as Egypt is fully rearmed by the Soviet Union.

Police Minister Eliahi Sasson told a rally in Ashkelon: "The Egyptian harassment on the Suez Canal is nothing but a dress rehearsal for crossing the canal."

Egypt will go to war because "it does not want peace under any circumstances" and cannot tolerate Israeli occupation of the Sinai Desert much longer, Sasson said.

Sporadic artillery, mortar and light weapon clashes occurred along a 20-mile northern stretch of the Suez Canal Tuesday night and into today, an Israeli army spokesman said.

SOLDIER KILLED

One soldier was killed and six wounded, the spokesman said.

The spokesman denied an Egyptian report that Arab gunfire had destroyed an Israeli military vehicle and wounded its 20 occupants Tuesday. The spokesman said two Israelis were wounded when unidentified gunmen fired on a civilian car in the occupied west bank Jordanian town of Jenin.

A curfew was imposed on the town of 14,000.

In Nablus and Ramallah, police made several arrests in an effort to head off trouble in the occupied territory when Israel marks its independence day Thursday. Leaflets signed by the Al Fatah guerrilla organization were distributed in Nablus calling for strikes and demonstrations Thursday.

Fortas Inquiry Proposed

See Page 39

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Republican congressman proposed today that the house judiciary committe initiate an inquiry which could lead to impeachment proceedings against Supreme Court Justice Abe Fortas.

The justice department announced that Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell told the congressman, Rep. Clark MacGregor, (R — Minn.) that constitutionally he "could have no objection to actions which are legally within the prerogatives of the house."

MacGregor hand-delivered a request for a preliminary inquiry into Fortas' affairs to Rep. Emanuel Celler, (D — N.P.,) chairman of the judiciary committee.

He asked for a meeting of the full committee Tuesday and asked that Fortas and Mitchell be invited to appear.

Celler later told the house that he and his committee's ranking Republican, Rep. William M. McCulloch of Ohio, had reached agreement on a course of action.

To Rep. H. R. Gross, (R — Iowa), who has called for Fortas' impeachment and who asked what course of action had been decided upon, Celler said only:

"I'm sure the gentleman will be astisfied with the action to be taken in the not too distant future."

Celler said he would discuss MacGregor's proposal with MacGregor later today.

Martial Law In Malaysia

Racial Rioting Takes 100 Lives

KUALA LUMPUR (CP)—The Malaysian government mobilized its army reserves as fighting between Chinese and Malay mobs continued in this capital city tonight despite a round-the-clock curfew ordered in an effort to stop rioting in which at least 100 persons are believed to have died.

The government assumed wide police powers.

An official proclamation announced here will permit the government to hold secret trials, suspend or amend any written law, deprive any person of citizenship, acquire or dispose of property, enter and search any premises, suspend incomplete elections in any state and institute court changes and set penalties.

More battling was reported in the Malay settlement of Kampong Bahru, where the first fighting broke out Tuesday night. Indians there were reported fighting the Malays. It was the first report of Indian involvement.

In downtown Kuala Lumpur, two persons were reported killed by soldiers who fired at persons stoning them from a downtown apartment.

The violence apparently resulted from the refusal of the Malaysian Chinese Association, the Chinese member of the governing coalition, to take part in a new government because of setbacks it suffered in the general election Saturday.

Heavy smoke billowed up from shops, houses and Malay kampongs set afire throughout the city of 500,000 people. Several thousand refugees poured into police stations, seeking sanctuary from the riots which destroyed or threatened their homes.

Police records showed 19 houses destroyed by fires, but a hurried survey of the downtown area indicated many more shops and homes destroyed by flames.

Correspondents today saw 30 houses destroyed by fire in one district less than a mile from the city centre.

Deputy Premier Tun Abdul Razak claimed today the situation "is under control."

Motorists Dragged From Cars

More than 100 cars, trucks and motorcycles, smashed to pieces or charred, littered the streets. There were reports Tuesday night that motorists were dragged from cars by mobs and killed.

Associated Press correspondent Brian Gomez saw a mob of 3,000 Malay youths storm a suburban village Tuesday night, "leaving a trail of bodies, smashed shops and burned cars."

The 24-hour curfew was extended to three nearby states late Tuesday.

Government leaders met with Chinese and Malay groups in an effort to end the hostilities. Tan Siew Sin, president of the Malaysian Chinese Association, told reporters he was prepared to reconsider the decision not to participate in the new government, but he said nothing about this in a television appeal for calm.

QUEBEC TEACHERS PROTEST

QUEBEC (CP) — About 5,000 teachers set out today on a five-mile march on Quebec's national assembly to call attention to almost two years of fruitless contract haggling.

The teachers planned to "demonstrate silently" in front of the assembly buildings for half an hour and then march another three miles to a teach-in at the Coliseum.

Air Strike Talks Resume

MONTREAL (CP) — Federal government mediators today began talks with Air Canada and Union representatives in another attempt to end the airline strike.

The mediators are Bernard Wilson, assistant deputy labor minister, and William Kelly, head of the labor department's conciliation and arbitration branch.

They met first with the 15-man delegation from the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers in a room on the ninth floor of a federal government building in downtown Montreal.

After about 15 minutes, the mediators met with a seven-man Air Canada negotiating team, waiting in another room on the same floor.

Neither side had any comment for reporters on the resumption of talks, which broke down again last Friday.

The mediators met with company representatives for 50 minutes, held a second meeting with the union which lasted about 20 minutes and then broke for lunch.

Cong Peace Package Open To Point-by-Point Debate

Cautious Nixon Speech Anticipated

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon, responding to what associates say is a public demand for a summation of the Vietnam situation, goes before the country tonight to give what is expected to be a cautiously optimistic assessment of peace prospects.

White House press secretary Ronald Ziegler said the speech, to be broadcast live at 7 p.m. PDT on television and radio, will contain some new material, but cautioned against expecting announcement of a peace breakthrough.

Nixon associates also said the president's speech will outline how matters now stand in light of the Viet Cong's 10-point peace proposal rather than announcing the breaking of new ground.

An official said there would be no pledge for unilateral U.S. troop reductions.

PARIS (AP) — The Viet Cong repeated today that their 10-point peace plan forms an inseparable package but said each of the points is open for discussion at the Paris peace talks.

In an interview with Agence France-Presse, the French news agency, Mme. Nguyen Thi Binh of the National Liberation Front, political arm of the Viet Cong, implicitly rejected a proposal for the Saigon government to break up the package.

The Saigon government said it was willing to negotiate on some details of the plan but termed unacceptable three of its essential provisions—a unilateral American withdrawal, a coalition government and "neutralization" of South Vietnam.

Mme. Binh's replies, given in writing, were mostly a repetition of passages from the 10-point plan submitted to the peace talks last Thursday by the front's chief delegate, Tran Buu Kiem.

In one verbal exchange with the interviewer, she explained that the front's proposal for a coalition government in Saigon did not modify its earlier demand for what it called a "peace cabinet."

This clarified one point that has been puzzling southern allied negotiators. Kiem's plan called for agreement on a "provisional coalition government" which would hold elections for a constituent assembly. The plan left in doubt whether the front was willing to negotiate such an agreement with the present Saigon government.

Heavy Action In Vietnam

SAIGON (AP) — Casualty tolls mounted today as heavy fighting continued across South Vietnam for the third day. Military sources claimed more than 1,800 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong were killed, many of them by American bombers, helicopter gunships and artillery.

Military sources estimated more than 100 U.S. troops were killed and several hundred were wounded since the upsurge in enemy attacks Sunday night.

South Vietnamese losses were put at 273 troops killed, 748 wounded and 11 missing.

U.S. Goes Ahead With ABM Plans

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Despite earlier assurances to the contrary, the Pentagon is now in the process of constructing the Safeguard Antiballistic Missile system without authorization from Congress which is deeply split over the issue.

The controversial nature of the ABM question burst into the open once again today in a clash between two leading scientists over whether the system is needed and whether it might provoke the Soviet Union to escalate the arms race.

Dr. Jerome B. Wiesner, provost of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, warned at a Senate hearing that President Nixon's Safeguard program would be interpreted by Moscow as the first step in a vast defence of the American population, prompting the Soviet to develop larger and more sophisticated weapons.

But Dr. Edward Teller, widely known as the "father of the H-Bomb," said development of the ABM would have a "stabilizing influence" on the arms race and would be preferable to deployment of more aggressive systems.

The two men testified before the Senate foreign relations subcommittee on disarmament, which reopened hearings on the Safeguard.

The Pentagon, meanwhile, sought to clarify which parts of the Safeguard system are already being built.

The defence department said in a statement it is purchasing ABM missiles for test firings at Kwajalein, in the South Pacific, and at White Sands, N.M.

It said under contracts awarded by the Johnson administration, production is going ahead on a long range radar, called Par, and on other electronic items which take a long time to build. These will be put on operational sites "if deployment is approved by Congress," the statement said.

Canada Week All for One But Quebec for None of It

By JOHN SLINGER

Canada Week, the first-ever week to promote the unity and image of Canada, has gone a little overboard in accurately reflecting that unity and image:

Premier Bertrand of Quebec refuses to have anything to do with it.

"Le tres Honorable Pierre Elliott Trudeau" and tous les other provincial premiers have come out in complete support.

Their names are affixed to the advance literature for the May 25-31 observance as co-chairmen and they have all sent letters saying its a swell idea.

Premier Bertrand sent a letter, too, but it is not included with the others.

In fact, it's on file at the Montreal headquarters of the Canada Week Committee which is "a non-political organization" which aims "to unite all Canadians, English-speaking and French-speaking, in one common purpose — that of promoting better knowledge of our country."

The committee's motto deftly designed as a bilingual maple leaf, says Le Canada C'est Tout and-or Canada Is Everything.

The Times, curious to know if the motto should more correctly be Canada Is Everything Minus One, today phoned the Canada Committee headquarters collect.

Andree Camirand, a public-relations lady with a voice that leaves one aware of how vive le difference is, said that today most of the committee's people were in Toronto celebrating the opening of English Canada's committee branch headquarters.

Mlle Camirand was asked how come there was no testimonial from Premier Bertrand to place beside Premier Bennett's "let us go forward together, united as one Canada; mindful of our past achievements and with faith in the future."

NO INVOLVEMENT

She said Bertrand had written to say that he didn't want to get involved with anything this controversial while he is in the midst of a struggle to retain leadership of his Union Nationale party.

And also, although the premier didn't say this, many Quebecers are expecting a fall election (who isn't?) and hands are being played close to the vest.

Asked if the Times could get a copy of the letter, Mlle Camirand said that would be all right, but warned "it's in French."

In the meantime, Canada will go forward together, or as together as possible.

Paris Peace Talks Likely To Go On and On and . . .

By MURREY MARDER

PARIS (WP) — A million words ago, an allied diplomat made a shrewd long-range forecast when the Vietnam peace talks began that is still valid today in this blase capital, a year later.

"You will never be certain," he said, "until the very last moment, whether the talks will be a success or a failure.

"When there is movement on any topic, there will be 'parentheses' around the 'movement.' Not until the end of the negotiations will you be sure whether the 'parentheses' will come off, to add up to an agreement, or whether they will stay on, to add up to deadlock."

The advice appears to be as sound now as it was in mid-May a year ago. The Paris talks are now going through their third stage. There is, as there periodically has been before, a surge of excitement about them—but much more so in Washington than in Paris.

President Nixon tonight will make a major address on Vietnam policy. It will be examined with microscopic interest by the negotiators and strategists of North Vietnam and the National Liberation Front as an important response to the first, comprehensive negotiating position presented here last Thursday by the communist side. Hanoi and the NLF will be appraising not only President Nixon's impact on the diplomatic process here, but on the tortuous military and political warfare in South Vietnam as well.

Preference to Kill

Whatever is said from the White House, however, at best can only be an episode in a grim continuing drama for which no participant controls the writing of the script.

Every hard-bargaining process among diplomatic antagonists employs ambiguities. Participants have initial positions and fallback positions. But the process here is one of supreme ambiguity, not only because the conference includes an odd mixture of Asian, Marxist and western negotiating styles, but because two of the current four participants, the South Vietnamese government and the NFL really prefer to kill each other off.

Nobody, therefore, is disclosing his ultimate bargaining hand and indeed, each side wants to be left in position to pursue the war if diplomacy fails, with its power undiminished by whatever happens in Paris.

The experts on the communist side in multiplying the ambiguities produceable in a single phrase or sentence, however, surpasses anything produced on the allied side.

Hot Dog Trick

North Vietnam's specialists in circuitousness, under the tutelage of President Ho Chi-Minh who spent a revolutionary lifetime zig-zagging his way to power, have managed, especially in the latest 10-point program offer in the name of the NLF, to build option moves into virtually every shaded section of their "solution" for Vietnam now pending here. It is a document constantly convertible into either propaganda or negotiation at every stage of what is certain to be an extremely long bargaining process, because actual negotiations on how to end the war have yet to begin.

A memorable film sequence from American comedy best illustrates the main elusive, underlying characteristic of the year-old Paris talks.

The late W. C. Fields was shown selling hot dogs. But he really had only one hot dog—and it was on a string. For each customer, the morsel of meat was placed in a roll, spread with mustard, and the purchaser walked away smiling, with anticipation. Fields surreptitiously pulled the string each time, retrieving his stock.

The true test in the Vietnamese talks similarly is consummation, not anticipation.

Key Developments

There has indeed been movement in Paris since these talks began, with the United States and North Vietnam as the original participants.

Most of the movement, however, has been on the allied side. The most important action so far was the United States' decision to halt the bombing of North Vietnam last Nov. 1 to attempt to encourage the start of actual negotiations. What has been happening since then has been a shifting of posture to get into position for either substantive bargaining, or the pretense of bargaining.

From Jan. 25, when the present four-party talks began after bizarre manoeuvering over the shape of the conference table, there have been, essentially, three major developments.

First, South Vietnam moved toward a position from which it could bargain. But in the process, the allied side did what the communist side least wanted: The Nixon administration and the Saigon government established closer harmony, damaging Hanoi-NLF hopes for splitting Washington and Saigon, and isolating the Saigon regime.

Alternative Plan

Second, the Nixon administration, with consequences yet to be measured, unveiled the idea of an "alternative" strategy of unilateral American troop withdrawals, whether or not the communist side agrees to "mutual troop withdrawals." The objective is to relieve American frustrations about the war, and to put pressure on the communist side to negotiate.

The third major move was the 10-point program, submitted last Thursday by the communist side, at least intended to try to recapture the propaganda initiative and, perhaps, to commence actual bargaining too.

The fourth move now awaits allied action. But in any event, there is no expectation whatever here that the pattern of move and countermove will produce any early finale to the continuing tragedy of Vietnam.

selves, they did create tension within the cabinet.

After the federal-provincial constitutional conference in February, Turner met the western ministers to examine their objections to the bill. He returned to Ottawa convinced that while the objections might not be well founded in fact or constitutional law, they were sincerely held, and that the federal government should do what it could, by amending the bill, to meet the western case.

AVOID COURT FIGHT

Turner was concerned also to avoid, if possible, a western appeal to the supreme court, not because he feared the result but because a court battle, although it might be on constitutional grounds — would be interpreted in Quebec as an attack from English-Canada on French rights.

Pelletier and other ministers were equally concerned that changes in the bill to pacify the west, although they might not weaken the principles of the policy, would be interpreted by French-Canadians as a federal surrender to English backlash.

The outcome of the cabinet battle was a compromise in which Turner did not get approval of all the amendments he proposed and Pelletier had to agree to some changes.

U.K. LESS ATTRACTED TO COMMON MARKET

LONDON (AP)—The British are cooling to the idea of joining the European Common Market, a public opinion poll showed today.

A Gallup Poll survey taken for The Daily Telegraph, May 3 to 7, after the April 28 resignation of French President Charles de Gaulle, showed only 41 per cent favored joining, compared with 57 per cent in March, 1965.

Those actively opposed to joining doubled, from 22 per cent in 1965 to 44 per cent now, while the ranks of the undecided diminished to 15 from 21 per cent.

Painting Donated

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The Minneapolis Institute of Arts reported Monday that it has received an anonymous gift of an Edouard Manet painting valued at more than $1,000,000. Entitled Le Fumeur, the 19th-century masterpiece shows a bearded old man smoking a pipe.

Mace Unsafe At Any Distance

TORONTO (CP) — A University of Toronto reasearch team says its studies show that there is no distance at which riot gas such as Mace can be considered safe to the eyes.

Using rabbits in their experiments, the team says that under usual conditions, there is little permanent damage if the gas is sprayed from a distance of six feet.

But Dr. W. G. Macrae of the department of ophthalmology said the gas could not be considered safe at any distance.

"If you've got an overzealous policeman who sprayed a whole can at someone, or if you had a person without normal eye closing responses, such as someone unconscious, under drugs, or drunk, you can get real trouble."

The Metropolitan Police Commission decided last August against allowing the use of Mace in Toronto. Chairman C. O. Bick said he and Chief James Mackey were not satisfied the gas was safe and would not cause permanent eye damage.

The first case of a policeman using mace in Canada was in London, Ont. early in July last year. Three youths were on the receiving end during a disturbance at a street dance, but none required medical treatment.

The Police Association of Canada has backed Ontario Attorney-General Arthur Wishart's stand that Mace shouldn't be used until more is known about its effects.

Bishop Takes Over From Editor-Priest

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — The bishop of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Buffalo has replaced the priest editor-in-chief of the diocesean weekly newspaper, The Magnificat, over differences of freedom of expression.

Rev. Gerald R. Forton said Tuesday Bishop James A. McNulty called for his resignation Monday and specified Monday 17 as the effective date.

Father Forton said the bishop's action was prompted by a resolution the editor introduced at an April 24 meeting of the Priest's Association of Buffalo. The resolution called for the exoneration and reinstatement of seven priests removed from St. John Vianney Seminary last summer.

Bishop McNulty transferred the seven priests for speaking out against Pope Paul's birth control encyclical.

The association adopted a resolution with the same basic effect as the one Father Forton introduced.

Father Forton, 46, said he is "considering leaving the priesthood because of problems of conscience concerning some teachings of the church."

School Principal Takes Year Off For More Studies

G. L. Seens, 45, principal at Edward Milne secondary school for the past four years, is resigning at the end of the school term to return to university.

Seens said today he wants a year of updating in his speciality of political science and then hopes to teach at a junior college. He will attend either UBC or Carleton University at Ottawa.

He started his teaching career in Prince George 11 years ago, moving to Edward Milne in 1962. Prior to that he spent six years with the department of external affairs in Ottawa, Vietnam and New York.

Cablevision Granted New Role

QUEBEC (CP) — The Canadian Radio-Television Commission today authorized the entry of cable television into local programming.

In a speech to the Canadian Cable Television Association, commission Chairman Pierre Juneau said new regulations being released here and in Ottawa set out the view that:

"The CRTC feels most definitely that cable systems have an important part to play in their community, and is anxious to encourage local programming, whether these be programs actually produced by the cable company or by groups within the community, or films and taped programs carried over the system."

He said the industry has been cautious about expanding into cablecasting without assurance the commission would not curtail it.

Air Canada Prosecution Proposed

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Air Line Employees Association announced Tuesday that it will seek permission to prosecute Air Canada for unfair labor practices.

John Hayes, president of the association, said in a statement the CALEA is processing an application to federal Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey for permission to prosecute the Crown-owned airline for violation of Canada's labor laws.

Air Canada's operations have been halted since April 20, when 6,300 members of the International Association of Machinists went on strike in a wage dispute.

Mr. Hayes criticized Air Canada for "summarily sending home" all union employees while keeping non-union clerks and supervisors on the payroll.

Air Canada had described its action as normal procedure, he said. It was normal procedure "only for managements which are outright anti-union and which care nothing for Canadian laws."

Community Arts Council Meets On Auditorium

Pros and cons of an auditorium for Greater Victoria will be discussed following regular business of the Community Arts Council annual meeting, Thursday.

Discussion will centre on whether a need exists, if so the size required, whether it should be an arts complex, where located, how it might be finance.

Invitations to the meeting have been sent to representatives of the provincial government, the mayors of Greater Victoria and members of the business community.

The meeting is open to the public.

It will be held in Room 112 of the Provincial Museum starting at 8 p.m. with reports and election of officers.

Main entrance of the museum should be used.

Gordon Fears U.S. Takeover

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — Walter Gordon, former Liberal finance minister, says Canada would probably be absorbed by the United States if Quebec secedes.

Speaking Tuesday to the annual convention of the Canadian Union of Students, Mr. Gordon said:

"If Quebec does separate — and I'm fearful it is going to — it's not likely that Canada could avoid absorption into the U.S. and I don't think Quebec would survive for very long."

He said Canada is faced with two main problems — the relation of the federal government to provincial governments, especially Quebec, and the domination of Canadian economy by foreign interests, mostly U.S. corporations.

"If we cannot resolve these two main problems, Canada is not likely to survive very long as a separate and semi-independent nation.

"If we want a separate deal for Quebec, then why not a separate deal for British Columbia, Manitoba and the other provinces?"

Meetings Calendar

Saanich Peninsula Branch, Navy League of Canada, Thursday at 8 p.m., Magistrate's Office, East Saanich Road and Wallace Drive. Guest speaker to be G. V. Bishop, division treasurer.

Maritime Museum of British Columbia, Tuesday, May 27, at 8 p.m. at the museum. Annual meeting. Dr. Archie F. Key to speak on "Backstage in Museums."

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Cold air from the Arctic brought snow to Fort St. John and northern Alberta overnight while showers and thunderstorms were reported in the northwestern U.S. Patches of cloud from these two disturbances will penetrate British Columbia today but generally skies will remain sunny. Thursday will also see mostly sunny weather in the province. Temperatures will be a little cooler.

The Weather and You

By Carl Riblet Jr.

In the United States and Canada it has been observed that residents of the eastern regions are not so much affected by the winds as are westerners. The difference is a matter of relative humidity. Usually, when there is a sharp increase in crime and disorder in a city—east or west—a warm, dry wind has been blowing through its streets.

Statistical researchers discovered that when Denver and New York City each had winds of about the same force for about the same period at the same time the police department of Denver was busier catching criminals than were the New York police officers. The Denver winds were dry. The New York winds were moist.

It is believed that when arid winds lower the humidity the electrical potential of the air is increased. On a dry day, when the atmosphere is highly charged, testing instruments in laboratories become charged more readily. It is only logical to assume that you and I also react and that our nervous systems become tense, irritable and uneasy when dry winds blow. Low humidity is mighty nice, though, on a windless day.

FROM PERU TO MEXICO AND ON EASTER ISLAND

Boats Made of Reeds Rode the Seas Like a Duck

This is the third of a series of articles written by Thor Heyerdahl about his epic Africa-to-America raft voyage, which comes 22 years after the historic "Kon-Tiki" expedition. Tody he discusses reed boat building in pre-Columbian America.

By THOR HEYERDAHL
(Special to the Times)

A reed is a tender water plant that can be bent by the hands of a child. A gust of wind along the swampy shores of a lake suffices to make the reeds wave like green grass in the field. A reed is a mere flower stalk unable to hold either a nail or a screw.

Yet, reeds have been used by man to navigate lakes and oceans, and pyramid builders in two continents have floated tons of cargo on bundles of reeds tied together.

When Columbus led the Europeans to the New World they first encountered enormous wooden canoes which navigated the open sea between Mexico and the Caribbean islands with a hundred men and several tons of cargo on board.

Watertight Hull

These vessels, however, had a regular watertight hull. As in European boat construction they were built as an empty shell filled with air, a shell which would sink if breaking seas entered from above or through a crack.

The principles of this type of watercraft were understood by the Spaniards because they followed a familiar pattern in European marine architecture, and they were considered to be real boats.

Then the European visitors crossed the Panama isthmus and on the Pacific side they built caravels to navigate down along the Pacific coast of South America.

The Indians of Panama had already told them of the existence of the Inca Empire with its wealth of gold and its sailing vessels which were reported to be as large as those of the Spaniards.

And true enough, a large vessel reported to carry sails and rigging like those of the Spanish ships, with a crew of men and women as well as 20 tons of precious cargo from the Inca Empire, was encountered and sacked by Pizarro's pilot before the Europeans reached Peru.

An Open Raft

To the surprise and disgust of the Spaniards, the large Inca craft proved to be nothing but an open raft of light balsa wood which permitted the water to move freely up and down between the logs. The merchandise on board was kept dry on an elevated deck of plaited bamboo.

One after another of these sailing rafts of balsa logs were encountered by the Spaniards until they had passed the jungle coast of Ecuador and reached the desert coast of Peru.

They found side by side with the balsa log-rafts a huge number of still stranger vessels, which from the distance looked like lofty ships with high and elegantly curved bow and stern.

The smallest of these reed vessels were nothing but tusk-shaped reed-rollers on which one or two men could ride astride as a horse, with their legs in the water. The larger ones, however, were reported to be as large as a real sailing ship, with a crew of 24 men.

The rugged and open shore of the Inca Empire, with its perpetual surf, rarely permitted the Spaniards to get safely ashore without local help. For this reason they usually had to trust the Inca sailors who took them ashore through the roaring breakers with the greatest ease.

They found that any water pouring over the strange wash-through Inca reed-boats just ran through their bottom and out, in an opposite direction of a European ship, making scooping or bailing unnecessary.

Records show that the arriving Spaniards marvelled at the Inca seamanship and the security of their strange vessels.

But with the conquest of Peru and the introduction of European culture, these wash-through bundle-boats and raft-ships disappeared with the rest of the amazing Inca culture.

To the modern generations they have become something symbolic of a primitive past, something leaking like a sieve, and therefore unfit for ocean travel.

A Misconception

Their non-European construction principles have been used to argue that the coastal population of Peru, although living almost entirely from off-shore fishing and coastal trade, had never discovered the secret of true boat-building — how to build a watertight hull.

This is indeed a great misconception. In fact, the Inca boat-builders knew very well how to make watertight canoes, but they used them only on calm rivers.

In rough seas and in the open ocean they preferred something which was fully buoyant in itself, which surfs and stormy seas could never fill: a wash-through balsa raft or bundle-boat of buoyant reeds.

When I built the balsa log raft "Kon-Tiki" and crossed the Pacific from Peru to Polynesia in 1947 I knew very well that the Inca and their coastal predecessors had possessed reed-boats as well as balsa rafts.

But no more than anybody else did I suspect a reed-boat to be seaworthy enough for a voyage of 4,000 miles across an open ocean.

I therefore chose to build a copy of the seemingly more solid wooden rafts. However, continued research in Peru, Bolivia and Polynesia gradually made me suspect that even the reed boat had been greatly under-estimated by myself and contemporary investigators.

Double Deckers

In the earliest pre-Inca ceramic art of Peru large reed ships with double deck and a great quantity of human passengers and cargo are commonly illustrated.

And reed boats large enought to carry cattle across the stormy waters were still being built on the mountain lake of Titicaca, in the high plateau of the South American Andes.

When I tried them on sailing trips with the mountain Indians I was impressed with their amazing steadiness and carrying capacity.

The reed from which these Peruvian bundle boats are built is known to botanists as Scirpus tatora. It is a fresh-water plant peculiar to America, where it grows in lakes and irrigated fields.

It does not propagate by seeds but by fresh shoots from old roots, and for this reason neither winds nor birds can spread it to distant lands.

One of the great problems of botany has therefore been the fact that the only place where this plant grew outside of America was on isolated Easter Island, two thousand miles from the nearest irrigated fields of South America.

At the time of European discovery it grew in the small fresh-water lakes inside the deep volcanoes of the island together with a Peruvian medical plant which was also unknown elsewhere outside of America.

Unable to Spread

It was unable to spread across the ocean unless the root stock had been carried by man with great care.

These two strictly American fresh-water plants were the only plants growing in the Easter Island lakes, and they were used by the aboriginal Easter Islanders for precisely the same purposes as in pre-European Peru.

Thus, the Peruvian totora reed was Easter Island's major building material for houses, mats, basketry, ropes and most specifically the construction of wash-through reed-boats of exactly the same types as on the Peruvian mainland coast from where the root stocks had been brought.

When the "Kon-Tiki" raft drifted past Easter Island on its crossing from Peru to the Tuamotu islands in 1947, the leading expert on Easter Island flora, Professor Carl Skottsbert, revised the old text in his "Botany of Easter Island" and stated that only such a pre-European voyage could have brought Scirpus tatora to the crater lakes of this isolated island.

Totora Root

However, in 1955-56, when I brought an archaeological expedition to that island, I was to learn for the first time that the local reed itself was good enough to make a bundle ship that could have carried totora root tubers safely acrsos the ocean.

The Easter Islanders built for our trial a small four-man reed boat which they paddled into the unsheltered ocean where it rode the breaking billows like a duck. This was, in fact, when I first started seriously to suspect that modern man had grossly underestimated this vessel.

Reed-boats with masts and sails were incised on the chest of giant stone statues tall as four-story buildings, and painted on the walls of old ceremonial stone houses.

Whereas the reed-boats of Peru and Bolivia have survived to modern times, those of Mexico are only known from casual references in the literature.

Various European travellers report to have come across bundle boats of reeds, bulrushes, and canes in a number of isolated Mexican lakes as well as along the shoreline of the ocean.

In California

One old color drawing from San Francisco Bay prior to European settlement shows two local Indians paddling a bundle-boat of cane, and this probably represents the northernmost distribution of this peculiar boat type in ancient America.

My efforts of tracing any possible survivors of this type of watercraft north of the Panama isthmus led to my friendship with two Mexican travellers-adventurers and skindivers, Ramon Bravo and German Carrasco, who offered to be my path-finders.

Such boats had until recently been in use among the isolated Seris Indians in the Gulf of California, they said.

We flew to Hermosillo in northwestern Mexico and crossed the Sonora desert to the barren local coast. Here, surrounded by gigantic candle-shaped cactus trees and flanked by rugged red mountains, a small tribe of colorful Seris Indians made their living from fishing in the open bay.

The women still painted their faces in gay colors and the men wore their long hair in a black braid down the back. But their small fishing craft which were pulled up on the beach were modern boats of wood, and the Indians proudly made us understand that reed-boats were something of the past.

Against an adequate contribution from our side, however, it appeared that the past was not very far away. Some of the older men were willing to build an "askam," or cane boat, and next morning before sunrise we all climbed into their larest plant boat to start a small expedition out to Isla Tiburon, where they were to cut the building material.

I had assumed that such material was plentiful and easily accessible. Otherwise, how had the Seris Indians thought of using it for boat building?

But this was an erroneous assumption. Upon landing on the large and uninhabited Shark Island we started a six-hour walk inland.

There were neither reeds nor canes to be seen, only desert shrubs, giant cacti, and scattered hardwood trees which would have served perfectly well for patching together plank canoes.

Not until we reached the centre of the island and climbed high up in a steep mountain canyon did we reach a semi-dry water hole completely overgrown by green cane. A sufficient quantity was cut, and heavily loaded with long cane bundles our file of Indian porters headed down the arid slopes.

The trackless desert now seemed endless to all of us, and we hardly noted that the bundles carried by the Indians steadily diminished while a dotted line of green canes dropped behind marked our route through the lowlands.

On our arrival to the village the total harvest left were three canes, all carried in one hand by the most energetic of our Indians.

And old Seris woman was furious ta the younger generation for this unsuccessful mission, and brought us to a large rubbish pile behind her little hut.

Here lay the remains of a slender bundle-boat of dry grey canes, made by her husband years ago. The husband, an almost blind former Seris chief, willingly repaired his old discarded cane-boat by means of new rope and a long wooden needle, and the old "askam" was launched from the ocean beach.

Two Indians jumped on board with paddles and a home-made harpoon and paddling around in the bay they caught a large turtle with which they triumphantly returned on top of the old and weathered canes.

The Last Boat

I realized that we had possibly seen the last bundle boat still preserved in Mexican waters. A proud tradition was ended in a country with a remarkable cultural history.

And I was sure it was a tradition. For what would elase have made the Seris Indians chose cane for boat-building, which was so scarce and hard to find in their neighborhoods?

Since bundle boats or reeds and canes have been widely used in adjacent parts of ancient America, the Seris Indians were hardly the original inventors.

But who were the original inventors? Peruvians? Mexicans? Or had the idea spread with the boat itself across the ocean from the Old World? Nobody has the answer yet.

Inner Circle Ban Placed On Callaghan

LONDON (CP) — Home Secretary James Callaghan, the government's most outspoken critic of the controversial union reform program, has been shoved out of the cabinet's inner circle by Prime Minister Wilson.

Barring Callaghan from meetings of the streamlined seven-member inner cabinet which guides policy, the prime minister appeared to be daring him to resign and seek the obscurity of the back benches.

This latest development in the government's internal struggles over union reform came after Callaghan missed a Tuesday meeting of ministers at the prime minister's residence.

Callaghan has frequently joined with labor unions in opposing the government's controversial Industrial Relations Act involving strike ballots, mandatory conciliation pauses before unofficial strikes and fines for wildcat strikers.

The downgrading of Callaghan came at a time when the Labor party is already distressed by losses in local elections, internal differences over union legislation, depressing trade figures announced Tuesday and the growing suspicion that world bankers are about to tighten Britain's financial straitjacket in return for a new loan.

The inner cabinet has not been named but is believed to include, Foreign Secretary Michael Stewart, Chancellor of the Exchequer Roy Jenkins, Social Services Minister Richard Crossman, Employment Minister Barbara Castle, Defence Secretary Denis Healey, Fred Peart, parliamentary business manager, and Callaghan.

Callaghan's demise marked another agitated round in the party power struggle arising from government determination to push ahead with its strike-curbing bill despite deep misgivings within the union movement, labor's traditional power base. The government has agreed to postpone introduction of the bill pending an emergency labor union conference June 5.

In the House of Commons Tuesday, Harold Lever, financial secretary to the treasury, defended himself against a barrage of questions about an unannounced visit to International Monetary Fund headquarters in Washington last week.

Lever went to negotiate a $1,000,000,000 standby credit for Britain to steady the pound. The IMF terms are believed to be tough, and MPs wanted Lever to disclose them immediately. He said he would as soon as Britain agreed to them.

Acute and Extended

IT HAS BECOME OBVIOUS that before the various boards and committees get anywhere in the controversy over the location of hospitals in this area, and particularly before the public is called on to make any decisions, it will be necessary to define terms. At the moment there is great confusion regarding the meaning of "extended care hospital." It is vital that definitions be agreed on before any further debate takes place. It does not matter which names are actually attached to the various concepts, so long as everyone uses them in the same manner and understands what is meant.

"Extended care" is meant in some quarters to refer to any hospitalization after the special services of an acute hospital are no longer needed. But this covers a wide area of treatment, and some persons prefer to apply the term only to hospitals which care for aged and infirm patients who presumably will end their days in the institution and require certain nursing services and assistance.

Accepting this more restricted meaning, then another term, say "convalescent," should be applied to hospitals to which patients could be removed for short-term recovery after their first few days of intensive care following surgery. Still another type, the "rehabilitative" hospital, is required for patients who need special therapy and exercises to restore the use of impaired muscles or regain other physical abilities. There may be other types of hospital services which should be distinguished.

The point is that no discussion can proceed sensibly unless all participants agree on nomenclature. Once that is established, it becomes apparent that different requirements are associated with the different categories of service. There may be great advantages in having one type of non-acute accommodation closely adjacent to the acute hospital for ease in transfer of patients, availability of equipment and convenience of medical staff. On the other hand, another type might be better situated in quieter surroundings which would be conducive to the recovery or the comfort of the patients.

The local region has a serious hospital problem on hand. The lengthy list of persons waiting to enter hospital, and the year-long wait they must endure, are quite unacceptable for a community of this size and prosperity in this modern day. Years are slipping by as various bodies try to cope with the situation —and some of their difficulties are certainly formidable—yet the badly needed beds are not yet on hand, the buildings are not yet built, and, indeed, the very locations of the bulk of the new beds have not yet been agreed on. Even the experts appear to be continually altering their earlier decisions. Now it appears that even the types of hospitals under discussion are not clearly distinguished by some participants, which adds to the difficulties of deciding on locations.

Within less than a year — on March 31, 1970 — the program of federal grants to aid hospital construction will cease, which means the provincial and local contributions will have to be increased. Buildings not under construction by that date will not be eligible for federal help. We hardly needed any extra incentive to get cracking—but there it is.

The People Care

HOW MANY CONSERVATIONists are there? Sometimes, when public protests are made about industrial developments which threaten to pollute the landscape or destroy wildlife, it is claimed the objections come only from a small, self-serving group which does not represent the community at large. According to a recent Gallup Poll in the United States, this is not the case. The public does care about preservation of the environment.

Half the persons interviewed said they were "deeply concerned" about the effects on our natural surroundings of air pollution, soil erosion, and destruction of wildlife. Another 33 per cent said they were "somewhat concerned" and only 12 per cent expressed unconcern. These opinions might not seem significant, except that those interviewed also said they were prepared to do something about pollution. Close to 75 per cent were willing to pay additional taxes to improve their surroundings.

It was also indicative of the widespread concern that people in the lowest income brackets were just as willing to pay at least a small amount as were the more affluent citizens. In these days when any rise in taxes is condemned, this attitude would appear to represent a genuine appreciation of the problem. Three out of every four persons interviewed said they favored the setting aside of more public land for conservation purposes, such as parks or wildlife refuges, which would also involve the expenditure of public funds.

The Gallup interviews confirm that many people now are less bent on pursuing more and more wealth for an illusory higher standard of living than they are concerned about preserving and enjoying what has already been attained. This is the big social question of the future.

Raising the Bid

THE DEMAND OF THE INTERnational Woodworkers of America that the British Columbia forest industry reopen the current wage contract—which does not expire until June, 1970—raises questions which the union should prefer to leave at rest.

A spokesman for the woodworkers accuses the companies of being greedy and "downright foolish" for not entering into negotiations for interim wage increases. The argument is that the companies have been making good profits and should voluntarily add to the increases agreed on earlier in working out the current contract.

But the proposal that contracts for a specific period of time should not be left intact could be a dangerous one. While the union bargainers are insistent that the companies make concessions beyond those agreed on at the negotiating table, would the union be of the same mind if it were the companies who were insisting that due, say, to market reversals, the workers should take an interim reduction in pay even though a wage scale had been agreed on?

The existing system of binding wage agreements has been worked out with a view to stabilizing industry between negotiations. It will be in the union's interest no less than the companies' if agreements are scrupulously observed.

COMMUNIST FLIRTATIONS — By C. L. SULZBERGER

'Mao, He's Making Eyes at Me'

ODD things are now taking place on the peripheries of China as a consequence of ever-increasing tension between Peking and Moscow. On the one hand, Russia has begun an extraordinary flirtation with Chiang Kai-Shek and on the other hand Communist China has started making googoo eyes at Marshal Tito, for long considered by Mao Tse-tung the greatest heretic of them all. If one examines these two extraordinary trends one sees that in the long run, no matter what its ideology, a government tends to give priority to national interests in time of trouble, shunting aside philosophical prejudice. Certainly the cautious development of friendship between Chiang's Nationalist Chinese government on Taiwan and the Soviet Union is a fantastic ideological reversion from the viewpoint of both Taipei and Moscow.

Sulzberger

Since 1927 Chiang has been fanatically anti-Communist although prior to that date — when he struck against his Chinese Marxist collaborators — he had been aided by Moscow. Chiang's son and heir apparent, Lt. Gen. Chiang Ching Kuo, studied in Moscow and married a Russian.

Nevertheless, for more than 40 years Chiang has preferred to regard all varieties of Communism as savage enemies and perhaps chief among these, the Soviet variety. Although Stalin at the end of World War II seemed to think Chiang had a better chance of ruling China than Mao, Chiang had little use for the Kremlin.

Moscow Taiwan Overture

This year, however, a Soviet journalist suspected of connections with Moscow's intelligence apparatus, was admitted to Taiwan and received by Chiang Ching Kuo. Since then there have been hints that contacts are slowly warming up. If Taiwan and the Soviet Union were first touching fingers they are now gingerly commencing to rub knees under the table. Direct anti-Soviet propaganda has almost ceased in Taiwan.

Obviously both Chiang and Brezhnev find it convenient to minimize past hostility because of the immediate primordial danger to each of Communist China. What Chiang probably wants is tacit understanding that Russia would not intervene if he were ever able to make a military lodgement in South China.

Moscow is probably ready to imply such a commitment because it is highly unlikely that Chiang will ever be able to return to the continent. The chances that this Oriental Bonnie Prince Charlie could re-establish his regime are zero. But the Russians obviously see no harm in giving Peking something extra to worry about on its rear while Mao beats war drums along the Siberian frontier.

There is no point in exaggerating this weird flirtation between the fading generalissimo and the Kremlin but it is an interesting example of cynicism in world affairs. Equally cynical, one might say, is Peking's sudden decision to ogle Yugoslavia after years of outright hostility.

Long before her quarrel with Moscow became flamboyant, Peking had been glowering at Tito. Indeed, one of the greatest criticisms of Khrushchev — seen by Mao as the worst Soviet leader of the lot — was the fact that he made up with Tito and promptly denounced Stalin. Peking responded by proclaiming Stalin's permanent position in the Marxist Valhalla.

It had already made the odd move of underwriting the security, economy, and ideology of Yugoslavia's tiny neighbor, Albania, because the Albanians can't stand Belgrade. But now China has decided to forget all this in the name of convenience. Because Tito is number one champion of Czechoslokia among Communist leaders, Mao has decided to wipe the slate clean. A trade agreement was signed with Belgrade and Tito's name has disappeared from Maoism's hate list.

Pragmatic Politics

One should not exaggerate the significance of these moves in which pragmatic politics have shunted aside dogmatic prejudice. Nor should one assume that in any way Taiwan — which remains an American client state — is suddenly becoming an Asiatic equivalent of Albania, an outflanking bastion.

Nevertheless it is evident that peculiar things are stirring along the borders of Russia and China as the two giants eye each other with increasing suspicion. The Chinese, who continue their proclaimed hostility to the United States, have notwithstanding become used to the idea that the Americans are not going to blow them up. America is the known enemy; Russia is the unknown enemy. And today both are abandoning previously fixed doctrinal positions as they edge toward the brink.

FROM CALGARY — By JAMES H. GRAY

Houses Rapidly Going Up—But Also Down

PRIME Minister Trudeau's recent comment on the housing situation—that there was no housing crisis in Canada — gives rise naturally to two questions: 1. What is a housing crisis? 2. For whom is there no crisis? The answers can be backed into this way: His statement hardly applies to the lower income third of the city dwellers of western Canada if by crisis he will accept the dictionary definition as "the decisive state of things." These people solve their crisis by paying a higher and higher rent which they cannot afford.

Gray

The flow in the statistics of housing starts is that no allowance is made for housing destruction. While thousands of new $150 to $200 per month units are going up, hundreds of units renting for $60 to $80 a month are being demolished, and are not being replaced. That is the situation which led to the tomato bombing of the prime minister in Calgary.

On one downtown street in Calgary five houses were demolished to make way for a new high rise apartment. It was the eviction notice to a score of families in these big old houses that spawned the organization that tossed the tomatoes.

This is the kind of housing units in which thousands of low-wage earners live in western cities: suites renting from $60 to $75 a month in former mansions. They are mainly clean, mainly comfortable and greatly over-priced. But their sheer availability at any price makes them attractive to people on low income.

On a half-hour drive around the Calgary core I counted more than 20 houses being torn down to make room for new high rises, parking lots or business buildings. In all probably 100 housing units are being destroyed to make room for 300 new units. Statistically there is a gain. Socially the gain is in misery, for there is no comparable accommodation for the evicted people to rent.

Some of the evicted people are on welfare. The welfare administration has abandoned its ceiling on the rent allowance. It pays what the recipients have to pay to get accommodation. They are charged what the traffic will bear, up to $250 a month for families in motels in the winter.

Pushing Rents Up

Upward pressure on rents from welfare is pushing up the rents everybody else has to pay, particularly for the marginal accommodation. A welfare official estimated that more than a third of the renters in Calgary now pay well over a third of their income for housing. That estimate seemed high. The official said the only way many families could survive at all with the rents they paid was for both parents to work, often with harm to their children.

Ottawa's theoretical solution, that construction of high-priced apartments will create vacancies all down the line and open things up at the bottom, is not happening in Calgary. Despite record apartment building, the space at the bottom is the tightest ever, thanks mainly to the demolitions that are taking place.

The effect, moreover, is being felt far beyond the minority of actual sufferers the Mandarins are talking about. Thousands of young marrieds are caught in a vicious circle. With costs and interest skyrocketing along with their rents, they cannot hope to save the downpayment on a house in their lifetime. And if they have a family they become involved in the rat-race to find an apartment that will take children.

Unhappy

Even the home-buyers are unhappy. Their interest payments have turned their dream houses into nightmares. Here again, even the near-affluent have to solve their housing crisis by mothers going to work, with consequent neglect of their children. The removal of the ceiling on mortgage interest did nothing for people who are already paying 10 per cent and disliking it intensely.

The anguish and frustration that the housing shortage has created has spread far beyond the minority of people who are desperately hunting housing they can afford. Its abrasive surface is rubbing civic and provincial administrations, and just about everybody in the private sector with a social conscience.

The frustration of the people caught in a sort of let's-do-something syndrome is rubbing off on the general public. The tomato fired at Mr. Trudeau was by no means a shot heard round the world. But it was at least an indication of disenchantment, the mounting anger and the impatience that is spreading as a result of the disappearance of the kind of housing accommodation that people on low income can afford to rent in the western cities.

Looking Back

From the Times, May 14, 1909.

The proposal of the E and N to erect coal bunkers and repair shops on the Indian reserve met with the approval of the Board of Trade at a meeting today. The company proposes to expropriate about 12 acres of the Songhees reserve to the south of the railway track in the city and upon this area to erect roadhouses of solid construction and repair shops. A trestle will also be erected south of the reserve.

"Just" for Some

After some years of talk about fighting inflation, Ottawa, according to press reports, is planning to give 29 per cent pay increases to 300 government officials. Of course, Ottawa has precedents for doing this in the 30 per cent increases awarded to seamen by Mr. Trudeau's predecessor and the 50 per cent raises to MPs.

These large increases to a favored few will encourage unions to strike for and get still higher wages, thus giving further impetus to the vicious circle of higher pay and higher prices.

The cost of these big increases will be borne by the already overburdened taxpayer, particularly those persons retired on "fixed" incomes — incomes which have decreased in buying power by 25 per cent in the past few years and which are steadily decreasing every month. These retired persons are not MPs and do not belong to unions or to the Civil Service. They cannot strike for more pay to offset their dwindling incomes.

The "just society" seems to be working very well — for some persons. — "Disillusioned."

"Lurching to Death"

It is obvious that the Japanese people depend to a large extent for a livelihood on the natural resources of countries such as Canada, and it would be unwise to deny them reasonable access to raw materials, but it would be foolish to deny that Japanese industrialists and other foreign exploiting companies are going to become very wealthy indeed as a result.

At this time one cannot help thinking a little wistfully of generous-hearted youths who cheerfully sacrificed their own personal interests to prevent our natural resources being wrested from us forcibly, and have now grown old. Especially one thinks of those who, in giving their lives, gave all they had to give, trusting their country to deal generously from its vast wealth with the older folk in the evening of their lives.

How quickly we forget! Corporations and trade unions wrangle interminably over the spoils, seeming not to care who sinks as long as they swim.

Competent historians say that "our western civilization is lurching to its death. The body cannot live without the soul." It is frightening to the aged to realize that, in spite of their past contribution to the growth of Canada, they are in a hostile environment. Is money really the only thing that counts? — Perplexed.

Realities Revealed

Montreal La Presse

Operation McGill, the cost of which all citizens now must bear while the organizers wash their hands of the whole thing, brought to light a few realities. The enormous amount of advance publicity which preceded it enabled the French-language press — speaking on behalf of the majority of Quebecers — to express its very definite opposition to the demonstration while expressing its appreciation of services rendered Canadians for close to 150 years by the university on Sherbrooke Street . . .

It also enabled our police department to show that it has acquired a dignity and skill in the performance of its duties really worthy of praise.

And, finally, it illustrated the difference between theoretical non-violence advocated by those who light the fuse and flee, and the strict practice of this non-violence . . .

If there was a peaceful march . . . we did not see it. What we did see, because violence is more spectacular, was a screaming mob, where thousands of youths, indoctrinated and fanaticized largely by those who should have taught them true patriotism, were shouting anything — slogans, insults . . .

As stated by Marcel Gingras in Le Droit, it is becoming more and more evident to anyone who has followed the political-social development of Quebec for the last few years, that the French-speaking population . . . risks becoming the victim of a handful of dangerous agitators.

THE CAMPUS REVOLUTION (2)

Students Reject 'Worship of Technology'

By KENNETH KENISTON
New York Times

Revolutions do not occur because new ideas suddenly develop, but because a new generation begins to take old ideas seriously—not merely as interesting theoretical views, but as the basis for political action and social change.

Until recently, the humanistic vision of human fulfillment and the romantic vision of an expressive, imaginative and passionate life were taken seriously only by small aristocratic or Bohemian groups.

The fact that they are today taken as real goals by millions of students in many nations does not mean that these students are "counterrevolutionaries," but merely that their ideas follow the pattern of every major revolution.

Indeed, today's student rebels are rarely opposed to technology per se. On the contrary, they take the high technology of their societies completely for granted, and concern themselves with it very little.

What they are opposed to is, in essence, the worship of Technology, the tendency to treat people as "inputs" or "outputs" of a technological system, the subordination of human needs to technological programs.

The essential conflict between the minority of students who make up the student revolt and the existing order is a conflict over the future direction of technological society, not a counter-revolutionary protest against technology.

In short, both the Oedipal Rebellion and the Historical Irrelevance theories are what students would call "put-downs."

If we accept either, we are encouraged not to listen to protests, or to explain them away or reject them as either the "acting out" of destructive Oedipal feelings or the blind reaction of an obsolescent group to the awareness of its obsolescence.

But if, as I have argued, neither of these theories is adequate to explain the current "wave" of student protest here and abroad, how can we understand it?

One factor often cited to explain student unrest is the large number of people in the world under 30 — today the critical dividing line between generations.

Most People Under 30

But this explanation alone, like the theories just discussed, is not adequate, for in all historical eras the vast portion of the population has always been under 30.

Indeed, in primitive societies most people die before they reach that age. If chronological youth alone was enough to insure rebellion, the advanced societies — where a greater proportion of the population reaches old age than ever before in history — should be the least revolutionary, and primitive societies the most. This is not the case.

More relevant factors are the relationship of those under 30 to the established institutions of society (that is, whether they are engaged in them or not); and the opportunities that society provides for their continuing intellectual, ethical and emotional development.

In both cases the present situation in the advanced nations is without precedent.

Philippe Aries, in his remarkable book, "Centuries of Childhood," points out that, until the end of the Middle Ages, no separate stage of childhood was recognized in Western societies.

Infancy ended at approximately 6 or 7, whereupon most children were integrated into adult life, treated as small men and women and expected to work as junior partners of the adult world.

Only later was childhood recognized as a separate stage of life, and our own century is the first to "guarantee" it by requiring universal primary education.

The recognition of adolescence as a stage of life is of even more recent origin, the product of the 19th and 20th centures.

Only as industrial societies became prosperous enough to defer adult work until after puberty could they create institutions — like widespread secondary-school education — that would extend adolescence to virtually all young people.

Needed More Training

Recognition of adolescence also arose from the vocational and psychological requirements of these societies, which needed much higher levels of training and psychological development than could be guaranteed through primary education alone.

There is, in general, an intimate relationship between the way a society defines the stages of life and its economic, political and social characteristics.

Today, in more developed nations, we are beginning to witness the recognition of still another stage of life. Like childhood and adolescence, it was initially granted only to a small minority, but is now being rapidly extended to an ever-larger group.

I will call this the stage of "youth," and by that I mean both a further phase of disengagement from society and the period of psychological development that intervenes between adolescence and adulthood.

This stage, which continues into the 20's and sometimes into the 30's, provides opportunities for intellectual, emotional and moral development that were never afforded to any other large group in history.

In the student revolts we are seeing one result of this advance.

I call the extension of youth an advance advisedly. Attendance at a college or university is a major part of this extension, and there is growing evidence that this is, other things being equal, a good thing for the student.

Put in an oversimplified phrase, it tends to free him — to free him from swallowing unexamined the assumptions of the past, to free him from the superstitions of his childhood, to free him to express his feelings more openly and to free him from irrational bondage to authority.

I do not mean to suggest, of course, that all college graduates are free and liberated spirits, unencumbered by irrationality, superstition, authoritarianism or blind adherence to tradition.

But these findings do indicate that our colleges, far from cranking out only machine-like robots who will provide skilled manpower for the economy, are also producing an increasing number of highly critical citizens—young men and women who have the opportunity, the leisure, the affluence and the educational resources to continue their development beyond the point where most people in the past were required to stop it.

So, one part of what we are seeing on the campuses throughout the world is not a reflection of how bad higher education is, but rather of its extraordinary accomplishments.

Even the moral righteousness of the student rebels, a quality both endearing and infuriating to their elders, must be judged at least partially a consequence of the privilege of an extended youth; for a prolonged development, we know, encourages the individual to elaborate a more personal, less purely conventional sense of ethics.

Create Own Critics

What the advanced nations have done is to create their own critics on a mass basis—that is, to create an ever-larger group of young people who take the highest values of their societies as their own, who internalize these values and identify them with their own best selves, and who are willing to struggle to implement them.

At the same time, the extension of youth has lessened the personal risks of dissent: these young people have been freed from the requirements of work, gainful employment and even marriage, which permits them to criticize their society from a protected position of disengagement.

But the mere prolongation of development need not automatically lead to unrest.

To be sure, we have granted to millions the opportunity to examine their societies, to compare them with their values and to come to a reasoned judgment of the existing order. But why should their judgment today be so unenthusiastic?

What protesting students throughout the world share is a mood more than an ideology or a program, a mood that says the existing system—the power structure—is hypocritical, unworthy of respect, outmoded and in urgent need of reform.

In addition, students everywhere speak of repression, manipulation and authoritarianism.

This is paradoxical, considering the apparently great freedoms given them in many nations. In America, for example, those who complain most loudly about being suffocated by the subtle tyranny of the Establishment usually attend the institutions where student freedom is greatest.

Around this general mood, specific complaints arrange themselves as symptoms of what students often call the "exhaustion of the existing society."

To understand this phenomenon we recognize that since the Second World War, some societies have indeed begun to move past the industrial era into a new world that is post-industrial, technological, post-modern, post-historic or, in Brzezinski's term, "technectronic".

In Western Europe, the United States, Canada and Japan, the first contours of this new society are already apparent.

And, in many other less-developed countries, middle-class professionals (whose children become activists) often live in post-industrial enclaves within pre-industrial societies.

Whatever we call the post-industrial world, it has demonstrated that, for the first time, man can produce more than enough to meet his material needs.

This accomplishment is admittedly blemished by enormous problems of economic distribution in the advanced nations, and it is in terrifying contrast to the overwhelming poverty of the Third World.

Nevertheless, it is clear that what might be called "the problem of production" can, in principle, be solved.

The transition from industrial to post-industrial society brings with it a major shift in social emphases and values.

Industrializing and industrial societies tend to be oriented toward solving the problem of production.

An industrial ethic—sometimes Protestant, sometimes Socialist, sometimes Communist—tends to emphasize psychological qualities like self-discipline, delay of gratification, achievement-orientation and a strong emphasis on economic success and productivity.

The social, political and economic institutions of these societies tend to be organized in a way that is consistent with the goal of increasing production.

The emergence of post-industrial societies, however, means that growing numbers of the young are brought up in family environments where abundance, relative economic security, political freedom and affluence are simply facts of life, not goals to be striven for.

To such people the psychological imperatives, social institutions and cultural values of the industrial ethic seem largely outdated and irrelevant to their own lives.

Once it has been demonstrated that a society can produce enough for all of its members, at least some of the young turn to other goals: for example, trying to make sure than society does produce enough and distributes it fairly, or searching for ways to live meaningfully with the goods and the leisure they already have.

Exhausted by Success

The problem is that our society has, in some realms, exceeded its earlier targets. Lacking new ones, it has become exhausted by its success.

When the values of industrial society become devitalized, the elite sectors of youth — the most affluent, intelligent, privileged and so on — come to feel that they live in institutions whose demands lack moral authority or, in the current jargon, "credibility."

Today, the moral imperative and urgency behind production, acquisition, materialism and abundance has been lost.

Furthermore, with the lack of moral legitimacy felt in "the System," the least request for loyalty, restraint or conformity, by its representatives — for example, by college presidents and deans — can easily be seen as a moral outrage, an authoritarian repressing, a manipulative effort to "co-opt" students into joining the Establishment and an exercise in "illegitimate authority" that must be resisted.

From this conception springs at least part of the students' vague sense of oppression. And, indeed, perhaps their peculiar feeling of suffocation arises ultimately from living in societies without vital ethical claims.

Tax Ruling 'Very Curious'

By DOUGLAS FISHER and HARRY S. CROWE

The Iron Ore Co. of Canada has been making the society and sports pages in Canada and the news and financial pages in the United States. The lovely daughter of Iron Ore president, W. J. Bennett, was escorted by Prime Minister Trudeau to the hockey game at the Forum in Montreal.

Fisher

A tax ruling in Washington which was published in the Federal Register on Jan. 15, 1969 — Five days before the Johnson administration gave way to the Nixon administration and which has just come to the attention of newsmen, will save Iron Ore's parent, Hanna Mining of Cleveland, tens of millions of dollars.

Crowe

Mr. Bennett is the Schrieber, Ontario, boy who became one of C. D. Howe's intimates, and for a while, secretary of C. D. Howe's investment operation, Penryn Company. Hanna Mining is controlled by the family of George Humphrey who was Eisenhower's secretary of the treasury.

The Howe-Humphrey relationship bloomed when Hanna moved into northern Quebec, and was the subject of many newspaper articles by Judith Robinson in The Telegram and by Drew Pearson in the United States.

Politics or Business?

The general theme of the articles was that the two should decide whether they were in politics or in business.

The new tax ruling is a very curious creature. It is written in very general language, as if it had a universal application, but it is hedged with very specific restrictions so that it could apply only to Iron Ore Co. of Canada.

The main spread which we have seen on the matter is by Sanford Waltzman of the Cleveland Plain Dealer in the Humphrey backyard.

At issue were the profits of the Quebec, North Shore and Labrador Railway Co., which runs from Sept Isles to Knob Lake, and which in turn is a wholly-owned subsidiary of the Iron Ore Co.

Since 1960 the railway has been paying dividends to Iron Ore. In that year they amounted to over $34 million.

If a consolidated tax return were permitted, then Iron Ore (which is incorporated in Delaware) could eliminate these dividends from its taxable income and retain them tax-free.

The railway, however, was chartered in Canada and the question was whether it could be considered as an American domestic railway for tax purposes.

A section of the U.S. Internal Revenue Act (1504D) does permit domestic status to a foreign subsidiary of an American company if the subsidiary was organized because the laws of the host country, in this case Canada, do not allow an American company to operate within its borders.

Clearly, you might think, this does not, and could not, apply to Canada. In fact the origin of the section was the trouble U.S. companies had in Mexico.

But the Iron Ore Company of Mr. Bennett was not so easily discouraged. They came up with an ingenious argument.

Policy or Law?

Beginning in 1960, the company argued that it was Canadian policy, if not Canadian law, that railways wholly situated within Canada should be Canadian and not foreign.

Several times this argument was turned down by Sheldon Cohen, commissioner of the Internal Revenue Service, whose job is to enforce the law.

But a new regulation was produced by the office of the secretary of the treasury which he had to apply.

Referring to Section 1504D, the regulation said: "The term 'laws of such country' includes in addition to explicit statutory or constitutional provisions, any existing legislative practice or policy."

Then it added: "For example, if the laws of Canada permit the ownership or operation of specified property, such as a railroad, only by a person granted a special legislative authorization, and it is established that there is an implicit legislative policy that such authorization would be granted only to a corporation organized under the laws of such country, then a corporation organized under the laws of Canada to own or operate such property will be considered of complying with the laws of such country."

So, just as if it were in Mexico, the Quebec railway qualifies as a domestic U.S. corporation. But that is not all. Limitations were then added which seem to limit the new deal solely to Iron Ore.

No Alternative

Sheldon Cohen had no alternative. He had to apply the new regulation and grant Iron Ore's claim to tax exemption for an amount which had risen to $136 million.

He is no longer internal revenue commissioner, and he has told the press that he was unaware that the wording was such that it was narrowed down in its applicability to one company.

Sanford Waltzman says that Hanna Mining and Iron Ore were aided by Henry Fowler, secretary of the treasury, and that they "enlisted the aid of the Canadian government which interceded for the company."

Starting in a Teacup They Blew Up a Storm

By ART STOTT

If the combined planning of Tommy Little here and "Barney" Barnwell in Vancouver jells, Chuck Chapman and Lynn and Muzz Patrick should be among old friends when they are inducted into British Columbia's Sports Hall of Fame at its inaugural Banquet of Champions in the Bayshore Inn May 27. Tommy and Barney are trying to assemble the old Blue Ribbons for a get-together before and at the dinner.

Stott

Such a gathering would open the floodgates of memory to Victorians of my generation. When the Blue Ribbons started their climb to the Canadian championship and the Sportsman's Cup they touched off one of the two periods of athletic hysteria I remember in the last 50 years here. The other, also with Patrick implications, occurred when Lester was taking his old Cougars, the former Aristocrats, to the Stanley Cup.

The Ribbons, drawn mainly from Victoria High School students and grads, were the inevitable conversation piece when Victorians met on the street, gathered at the office counter or sat to breakfast, lunch or dinner. The tension mounted as our boys pushed higher up the slopes of Olympus.

★ ★ ★

If memory serves, they had to clear one big hurdle before they could move toward the national title. The University of British Columbia, with Jimmy Bardsley, Bob Osborne and one or another of the Hendersons, went down fighting to the last whistle each year in the provincials. The little Alberta town of Raymond brought in its light-green-shirted Union Jacks for the far west's series, then the Winnipeg Toilers tried to hold the bridge and failed, before our boys—and there was a personal attachment between citizens and the team—hit the main event, the final against Windsor-Walkerville Alumni. The story was repeated year after year, with the Ribbons eventually becoming the Dominoes and the alumni changing its club name and sponsorship to Assumption College.

Ernie Cook was handling the boys in those days, prior to Dave Nicol's direction, with Barney looking after the details for the club. From small-town basketball we moved into the big league as far as Canada was concerned. The old Victoria High gym was crowded out for games. With city encouragement the series moved to the Main Building at the Willows fairground, and spectators hung from the rafters. Civic banquets were staged for the teams and "Doc" Tolmie, premier of the province, held a special luncheon at his Cloverdale home.

The club took on confidence and class. A small incident indicates the advance. When the House of David was barnstorming around the continent, it played here one year using its regular format—serious basketball in the first half to run up a commanding lead and then freak ball-handling and clowning, like the Globe Trotters, for second-half entertainment.

★ ★ ★

By our standards at the time, the visitors were superlative. The last time I saw them play here the Ribbons had become the Dominoes and by half-time they had run up a score far beyond House of David ability to overcome the lead. Then, in the second half, our boys came out in false whiskers and hillbilly hats and gave the House of David a lesson in ball-handling, fancy passing and comedy.

Those of us who were around then look back on those days as a highlight of Victoria's all-time sport. Every member of the team earned and deserved the medals he won. Our town had produced athletic heroes.

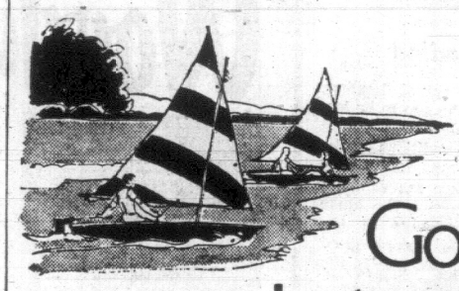
All of them have not been, and cannot be, elected to the Hall of Fame—though as a team they probably deserve to be. But on the 27th British Columbia will be honoring three of them, Lynn, Muzz and Chuck. Chuck, for my money, and a lot of people agree with me, was the greatest guard in Canadian basketball in his era, with the finest pair of hands and elastic arms in the business. Lynn had that ineffable elegance that some athletes attain and Muzz was a one-man demolition squad. He seemed to spend half his time sprawled on the floor, but there were usually two opponents down there with him, the most effective awkwardness in the game here.

A lot of us who were young and active in various branches of sport in those days are growing a fine head of skin now. We creak in the joints and have to make two starts before we straighten up from gardening. Still, the breeze of youth blows for us with memories of the Blue Ribbon-Domino dynasty.

★ ★ ★

Lynn and Muzz owe their elevation to the Hall of Fame equally to hockey and other sports. But they were there with the Ribbons and they'll join others of the club, Norm Baker, Porky Andrews and Doug Peden who either wore the blue and red of the original team or the black and white of its successor.

We talk frequently of "Operation Teacup" in this town, referring to the refurbishing of an elegant hostelry. In athletics, we look back on a tea and coffee firm that really blew up a storm—and this month we'll honor the former boys who carried the name in a sports cyclone across the country and beyond.



Good times just naturally go together with Old Vienna.

Next week "Snoopy" will venture to within 50,000 feet of the moon while "Charlie Brown" orbits overhead ready to rescue him.

"Snoopy" is the code name for the lunar module that will carry astronauts Thomas Stafford and Eugene Cernan on man's closest approach to the moon. "Charlie Brown" is the call sign of the command module from which John Young will be keeping a watchful eye on his companions below. The names replace "Spider" and "Gumdrop" used on Apollo 9. This Apollo 10 mission, scheduled for launch Sunday, will be a full rehearsal of a moon-landing flight that includes every manoeuvre but the final approach and touchdown on the surface.

Why go all the way to the moon and stop less than 10 miles short? The lunar module on Apollo 10 cannot carry enough fuel for a landing; NASA feels it does not have all the information and experience needed, and going below 50,000 feet would take the astronauts beyond the point of rescue.

Overpowering

For Stafford, a 38-year-old Air Force colonel from Weatherford, Okla., and Cernan a 35-year-old Navy commander from Chicago, the temptation to land might seem overpowering. But as the tall, balding Stafford points out, "I have enough fuel to land, but not to take off again."

The first lunar modules made were too heavy to carry enough fuel for a landing. The booster rocket simply could not handle this much weight. Then two special programs, in which the manufacturer spent up to $50,000 to slice off a single pound, drastically reduced the burden. The lunar module to fly on Apollo 10 is still too heavy, but on Apollo 11 it is fit for a landing.

Even if the necessary 400 pounds of fuel could be added, Snoopy would still not make a landing. NASA needs more experience in operating the lunar module, more data on the landing sites and more information about the problems of navigating in the vicinity of the moon.

Nose to Nose

On both this mission and the lunar-landing flight, lunar module and the command module will orbit the moon nose to nose at an altitude of 69 miles. Then the lunar module will separate from its mothership and fire its engines to get into an elliptical orbit which will take it about 50,000 feet from the lunar surface at its lowest point.

For a landing, the descent engine would ignite at this altitude and the lunar module pilots would proceed to make a powered touchdown about nine minutes later. On Apollo 10 the same engine will be fired, but instead of landing the lunar module will go into a more elliptical orbit. In this orbit, it will coast upward to 220 miles altitude then back down to about 10 miles above the surface.

Landing Sites

The two orbits will take the astronauts over two potential landing sites. As the spacecraft moves between 100,000 and 50,000 feet, Cernan will shoot movies and Stafford still photographs of the sites. Stafford also hopes to use a television camera that will give Earthbound viewers the first live color telecast from the moon.

The spidery lunar module has two stages — the descent and ascent stages — both of which have rocket engines. As Snoopy comes down on its second pass over the landing areas, the descent stage separates. Ten minutes later the astronauts in the ascent stage fire that engine and head back up for a rendezvous with Navy Commander Young in the command module.

Firing the ascent engine is the most crucial manoeuvre on a landing mission. When the complete lunar module sits on the moon's surface, the descent stage serves as a launch pad when the astronauts begin their journey homeward in the ascent stage. If the ascent engine does not fire, the men will be stranded on the moon with no hope of rescue.

Rescue Snoopy

Firing this engine on Apollo 10 comes closest to testing it under lunar-launching conditions. If it does not ignite, or burns improperly, on this mission, Charlie Brown can still rescue Snoopy as it coasts up on its elliptical orbit.

John Young, 38, a San Francisco native, is a superbly-skilled pilot who has flown on two space missions and has more time in the command module simulator than any other astronaut. Stafford is also a veteran of two flights, one of which involved the first American rendezvous in space. Cernan served as a co-pilot with Stafford on the latter's second flight, during which three rendezvous were made and Cernan took a walk in space.

The landing areas that Apollo 10 will investigate are two of five possible sites NASA chose for the lunar landing. They are relatively smooth areas spaced across the near side of the moon and close to its equator.

Actual Landing

During the actual landing, NASA wants the sun to be low in the lunar sky so that light and shadow conditions make differences in topography easy to see. The sun moves from east to west across the lunar surface, and delays in the launch can be compensated for by moving one site to the west for each day's delay.

During Apollo 8, astronauts got a close look at Site 1, the easternmost. NASA rejected this as a landing area and thereby changed the launch date of Apollo 10 from May 17 to 18. This puts the lunar module over Site 2 when lighting conditions are right, and gives the astronauts a chance to inspect Site 3. Launch date for the landing mission also slipped from July 15 to 16, indicating that the space agency will aim for Site 2, a three-by-five-mile elliptical area in the southwest part of the Sea of Tranquility.

NASA geologist John W. Dietrich describes this place as a "very flat area" with the peaks of low hills visible to the southwest. He says it may be overlaid with volcanic ash since its surface is dark. If so, walking on it will feel like walking on dry, coarse sand.

Gravity Traps

Apollo 10 must also check out "gravity traps" on the moon before a landing can be made. These are regions where lunar gravity is unusually high, causing uneven accelerations in the flight path of the spacecraft. The increased gravity is though to be produced by concentrations of iron below the surface, and engineers feel that the wobble they cause in the flight path could lead to a six-mile landing error. This increases the risk of coming down in terrain too rough for a safe landing. By closely tracking the Apollo 10 spacecraft, flight controllers hope to determine what effects these traps have on flight paths, and so compensate for them on Apollo 11.

Stafford, Young and Cernan will reach the moon a little over three days after they are launched from Cape Kennedy. On their second orbit around earth, the astronauts will fire the third-stage engine long enough to start them on their coasting flight to the moon.

Ready for Descent

About two hours later, Stafford, the mission commander, will separate the command and service module combination from the third stage. He then makes a 180-degree turn and docks with the lunar module, which is carried on the third stage. After docking, the lunar module is extracted and the third stage is cast away into space.

Upon reaching the moon, the crew manoeuvres into a 69-mile-high circular orbit. Then Stafford and Cernan crawl through a tunnel into the lunar module. They get everything ready for the descent, then return to the mothership for eight or nine hours' sleep.

The next day calls for 20 hours of intense activity—the longest, most difficult day ever experienced by a space crew. (It will be even tougher on Apollo 11.) Lunar module will be away from its mothership about six hours during its two passes down to 50,000 feet and the subsequent rendezvous and docking. While Snoopy and Charlie Brown are in separate orbits, they will be as far as 400 miles apart. But the two craft will never be out of sight of one another, acording to Milton Windler, one of the Apollo 10 flight controllers.

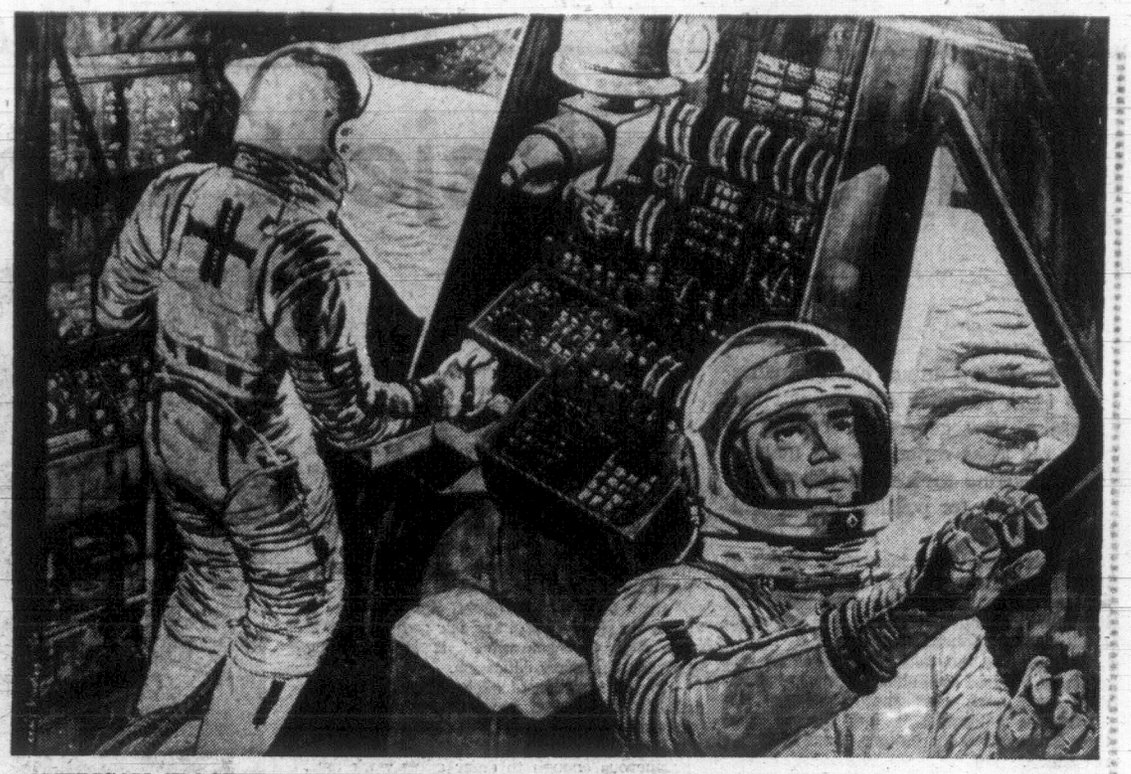
After firing the ascent engine to start back from 50,000 feet, the astronauts make two more burns to circularize their elliptial orbit. This will put Snoopy behind and below Charlie Brown. In the final manoeuvre, Snoopy will gradually overtake and dock with the mothership.

Around Sun

After docking, Stafford and Cernan will crawl wearily through the tunnel and join John Young in the command module. Next, the crew will separate from Snoopy. Ground controllers will then ignite Snoopy's engines and send the $41 million spacecraft into orbit around the sun.

Charlie Brown will make 11 more revolutions of the moon before starting home. During that time the crew will concentrate on getting experience navigating in lunar orbit. They will attempt to determine their own position, the location of lunar landmarks and the effect of gravity traps on their orbit. They will also take photographs and transmit TV views of the moon to earth.

After more than 60 hours in moon orbit, three times longer than Apollo 8, the crew will ignite the main engine and start for home. A splashdown in the Pacific Ocean near Samoa, 192 hours (eight days) after launh, will bring the most exciting and complex space mission to date to a sucessful end.



AMERICAN SPACEMEN will inspect and photograph two proposed landing sites as their craft descends to within 10 miles of the moon's surface. They will complete two orbits before returning to earth.

Lebanon, Guerrillas Fail to Reach Pact

By DAVID HIRST
The Manchester Guardian

BEIRUT — Lebanese authorities have failed to reach an agreement with the Palestinian guerrillas. At best they have earned a breathing space to take stock of a situatiin which now looks more bleak and uncertain than ever.

After five days of tough high level consultations to hammer out a modus vivendi between army and guerrillas on Lebanon's southern frontier, all that the two sides seem to have achieved is a first-hand insight into the intrasigence of the other.

Yasar Arafat, the Fatah guerrilla chief who was lured (some say on false pretenses) to Beirut to put his name to an agreement, not only left for Amman Monday without doing so, but he and his lieutenants apparently shocked the Lebanese with their scant respect for the country's special status in the Arab world, which other Arab regimes, with periodic backslidings have generally respected.

INSIST ON RIGHT

The guerrillas insisted on their right to use Lebanon as a base of operations against Israel, as well as on freedom of political activity and the lifting of Draconian restrictions now in force at refugee camps.

The first demand, in particular represents for the Lebanese an inadmissible infringment of their sovereignty, something which they are bound to resist as fiercely as they have resisted schemes for the stationing of Arab troops on their territory in the past. Their military negotiator rejected it out of hand, or laid down counter conditions — such as the use of special corridors — which amounted to the same thing.

Paper Suspended

SAIGON (Reuters)—The government has suspended another newspaper—the 27th since press censorship was abolished 11 months ago. The 30,000-circulation Dan People was closed indefinitely. A ministry spokesman said the newspaper recently carried a story criticizing government investment in a new strain of rice which can produce two or three crops a year.

Big Demand For Men To Help Boys

About 50 of 1,000 fatherless boys in the Greater Victoria have "big brothers," but that's not enough, according to Walter Donald.

As vice-president of the Big Brothers group, Donald said he was deply concerned about the need for more volunteer companions for the fatherless boys.

This is Big Brother week, he said, and the organization hopes to at least double the number of volunteers working in this area.

SCREENING

The volunteer, after careful screening and matching, is assigned to be a "big brother" to one boy.

He meets with the boy on a continuing program, but there are no planned social events involving the whole group.

Men interested in becoming a big brother to a fatherless boy should contact Walter Donald at 386-2441.

Labor Strife Idles Thousands in B.C.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Almost 2,000 men are on strike in British Columbia, thousands more have been made idle by strikes and other thousands are threatening to strike or are involved in contract disputes.

Biggest strike, one by about 900 plumbers, is in its fifth week and at least 10,000 other tradesmen have refused to cross picket lines. An estimated $300,000,000 in construction is affected by the strike.

Strike threats include 2,200 civic employees in Vancouver and suburban Burnaby and Richmond, 500 oil refinery workers and 700 meatcutters employed by British Columbia supermarkets.

In addition, B.C. men are involved in the Air Canada machinists' strike and in a dispute with CP Air. And the International Woodworkers of America say 28,000 coastal members are "frustrated."

A partial list of strikes, threatened strikes and areas of dispute:

—The 900 members of Local 170 of the Plumbers' Union have been offered $1.48 an hour in pay increases plus benefits, but want this retroactive to April 1. They now earn $4.18 an hour.

—About 450 employees of Lenkurt Electric Co. in Burnaby, members of Local 213 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, have been on strike since April 21. They seek a 29-per-cent pay increase over two years, now earn $2.07 to $3.69.

—The 700 meatcutters, who have not yet served strike notice, are seeking a pay increase of $1 an hour and reduction of the work week to 36 hours —as four nine-hour days.

—Strike notice has been served on MacDonald Consolidated Ltd., distributors for Canada Safeway, to back demands for a 20-per-cent pay increase for truckers and warehouse employees. They now earn $3.24 to $3.89 an hour.

—About 750 employees on B.C. government ferries are threatening to "work to job requirements" while seeking a commitment from the civil service commission for pay increases in September to preserve pay parity with non-government vessel workers. They had a pay raise in April.

—Strike notice was served Monday on the six oil companies on the B.C. lower mainland as 550 men seek a pay increase of $1 an hour over two years on base rates of $2.95-$4.07. A union spokesman said a strike could bring the whole province "to a standstill."

—One hundred drivers for Vancouver Island Coach Lines went on strike last week, seeking a 38-cent hourly pay increase in a one-year pact. Current base rate for drivers is $3.48 an hour.

—About 300 machinists in Vancouver are involved in the Air Canada strike and more are involved in a dispute with Vancouver-based CP Air over similar pay and benefit demands.

—Civic employees in Vancouver, Richmond and Burnaby have voted to strike to support demands for a 13-per-cent pay increase. Base rate is $2.77.

EXTRA CP FLIGHTS MAY BE LABELLED HOT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Machinists employed by Canadian Pacific Airlines will vote today on a resolution asking that all extra flights introduced by CP Air since the start of the Air Canada strike be declared hot and classed as strike-breaking flights.

The executive and shop stewards of Lodge 764 (CP Air) of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers approved the resolution Tuesday. Pat O'Grady, lodge business agent, said.

He said the general membership will vote today and the extra flights will be declared hot as of midnight tonight if the resolution is approved.

O'Grady said the move came following a request for support from the striking Air Canada machinists.

U.S. Army Delays Plan For Sea Dump of War Gas

WASHINGTON (WP) — The army agreed Tuesday to have non-military scientists review its plan to dump tons of surplus war gas into the Atlantic Ocean.

Pentagon officials defended the disposal plan before skeptical congressmen as the quickest and least hazardous way of getting rid of the poison gas.

But acting assistant army secretary Charles L. Poor disclosed that the National Academy of Sciences is being asked to make an independent review of the deep-sea dumping 250 miles east of Atlantic City, N.J.

The house foreign affairs subcommittee hearing also produced an indication that the interior department is opposed to the dumping because of the gas' possible effects on sea life. A statement released by assistant interior secretary Leslie L. Glasgow said. "We are opposed to the use of the ocean as a dumping ground."

Poor said that neutralizing the poison gases with other chemicals would require constructing a new facility and might take as long as 59 months. He said this would be "hazardous for an unacceptable period of time for too many people." Burning off the gases would take 68 months, he said.

The army plans to move on 809 railroad cars large quantities of nerve gas in old air force bomb clusters, containers of mustard gas, some contaminated containers and a small amount of tear gas.

The trains will pass through such cities as Indianapolis, Dayton, Knoxville, Cincinnati, Philadelphia and Elizabeth, N.J., on the way to Earle, N.J., where the gas will be loaded on to old liberty ships to be sunk at sea.

Students Hurl Firebombs

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

More than 600 National Guard troops stood by near the Baton Rouge, La., campus of Southern University, where relative calm followed a riot by 1,000 students.

In Memphis, Tenn., a grand jury indicted 109 students on trespass charges at Memphis State University for a sit-in last month.

A Brooklyn grand jury indicted 20 persons on arson, riot and conspiracy charges arising from Brooklyn College disorders.

At Ithaca, N.Y., 18 persons were charged with criminal trespass in connection with the takeover of a Cornell University building by black militants last month. The charges all are misdemeanors.

In a separate case, 15 persons were arrested in Ithaca early today on drug charges. Most are high school and college students. Their arrests arise from 21 sealed indictments returned by a grand jury Tuesday and had nothing to do with the building takeover at Cornell.

Lousiana Gov. John McKeithen planned to meet today with a student committee, hoping to prevent a recurrence of the Tuesday clash between students hurling firebombs, rocks and bottles and police, who fired tear gas from shotguns.

Two students underwent surgery for removal of tear gas pellets. Thirteen other students and two sheriff's deputies were injured after students burned a truck on campus. Police arrested three students for aggravated battery and 14 for criminal mischief.

McKeithen called up the National Guard after the clash. They were stationed overnight three miles off campus. The governor said they would enter the campus "at the first indication of further breakdown of law and order."

Editors Face New Charges

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two editors of the underground newspaper Georgia Straight were charged Tuesday with counselling a criminal act and publishing obscene matter.

The charges against editor-in-chief Dan McLeod and managing editor Robert Cummings allege illegal matter appeared in the March 28 and April 25 issues of the paper.

Also named in the former charge was the Georgia Straight Publishing Co.

The prosecution will allege that a full-page article in the March 28-April 3 edition detailed how to plant, grow, cultivate, harvest and cure marijuana.

'MEET STANDARDS OR CLOSE DOWN'

A "free school" in the Gulf Islands will be ordered to come up to health standards or be closed.

The decision was made by the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health Tuesday.

The Saturna Island Free School houses 20 children aged six to 17.

A deadline of May 20 was set by the board for compliance with health regulations. If the school was not brought up to standard, it would be closed "forthwith."

In a letter to Tom Durrie, who runs the school, senior medical health officer Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread said "drastic steps" must be taken to clean up the place. He said conditions may result in an epidemic of gastro intestinal disease.

In a letter to the deputy minister of health, Dr. Whitbread said the water supply is of questionable quality, the kitchen filthy, little bedding and evidence of overcrowding in some rooms.

"In our opinion it was operating as a boarding home for 20 children," he said. "It is not, in our opinion, a school."

A letter from Durrie, read to the board, said "we will carry out your instructions as fully as we are able." There had been several cleanup sessions and an additional staff member had been hired.

Dr. Whitbread commented to the board that the Saturna Island problem was also a problem throughout British Columbia. It should be investigated by the health, education and welfare departments.

"Unless the education department defines what a school is, then somebody has got to take action if these schools are going to operate in a proper way," he said.

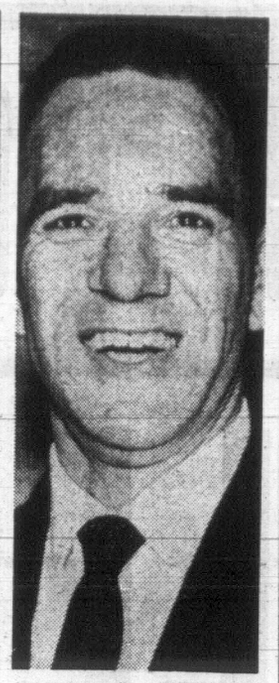
HOUSING PLAN OUT

A housing developer has withdrawn an application to dump treated sewage into De Mamiel Creek, which runs into the Sooke River.

The information was given to the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health Tuesday following its opposition to the scheme one month ago.



CANNON
... defends position

UNION TO VOTE ON PACT

LAKE COWICHAN — A meeting will be held Thursday to discuss wage demands made by Lake Cowichan school district janitors and bus drivers and their notice to strike.

The workmen are members of International Woodworkers of America. President of Local 1-80, Weldon Jubenville, said 72-hour notice of a strike would go into effect after the Labor Relations mediation officer signed his report.

The membership wanted 35 cents an hour but has accepted the officer's proposal of a two-year contract containing two 20-cent increases and other fringe benefits.

Group Adds Tenants To Office Holders

CHEMAINUS — Dues-paying tenants as well as property owners will be allowed to hold office and vote at future meetings of the Chemainus Ratepayers' and Citizens' Association, it was decided Tuesday night.

The words "and citizens" were added to the former name.

President Mrs. Jean Fyffe said qualified individuals were disqualified as executive material previously because they were not property owner. She included in this category Alan Shillito, secretary-treasurer.

Mrs. Fyffe and Shillito were among the executive acclaimed to their positions at an election following the regular meeting. Also acclaimed were Vice-President Lawson Meade and Secretary Mrs. Bill Gilmore.

The slate of 10 directors include Earl McColl, Baden Millard, Cedric Lonsdale, James Webster, Alan Hussey, William Bunyan, Louis Shelling, Arnold Cherry, Graham Constance and Mrs. Edith Buchner.

Alderman Under Fire Over Budget Mergers

CHEMAINUS — Ald. John Cannon came under heavy fire from Chemainus Ratepayers' Association Tuesday night over the contentious issue of amalgamation of the budgets of four area volunteer fire departments.

Cannon, who instituted the amalgamation of budgets while he was chairman of the fire protection committee of North Cowichan, took the brunt of the charges.

Ald. Tom Burge who now heads the committee also was present as were all other members of North Cowichan council.

Although he stressed there was no plan to amalgamate the fire departments themselves only the budgets, the ratepayers' group resolved to strike a committee to investigate the ramifications of amalgamation and "other matters of mutual interest."

SURPLUS

Ratepayer Ken Hatton argued that Chemainus had a surplus of $5,000 the last two years but the mill rate still went up from 3 to 4.06 mills. "But Maple Bay has no change and they are to get a new truck and a fire hall," he said.

"We were quite happy with things the way they were."

Cannon told the group of 50, some from Crofton Ratepayers' Association, that the MacMillan Bloedel industrial assessment was for the use of the whole municipality and helped make possible long-range planning and installation of a radio alarm system beneficial to all departments.

He said increased taxes based on a $10,000 home amounted to only $1.38.

LOSS OF AUTONOMY

Ross McDougal of Crofton feared loss of autonomy through amalgamation of the budgets. "The South End has control because of its higher population," he said.

Cannon suggested perhaps a modified ward system might be the eventual answer to those who feared loss of autonomy through less representation. He also pointed out that Chemainus built 12 houses last year while the South End built 75.

"The big problem in this 96-square mile area is that only the South End has adequate assessment. Smaller areas such as Crofton and Maple Bay have to be subsidized."

Cannon said all volunteer fire departments he met in March last year had voted unanimously to go ahead with limited amalgamation "for the good of the whole municipality."

He denied Hatton's charge that certain figures were not produced when asked for and a set of bylaws were promised but not drawn up.

PREMIER TO ATTEND OPENING

DUNCAN — Premier Bennett will be asked to plant a dogwood tree, the provine's emblem, at Cowichan Valley Forest Museum which opens Saturday, a spokesman said today.

Patrick Rogers, chairman of Duncan Social Credit action committee, said the premier would attend with Ray Williston, minister of lands and forests.

"This will be the first time premier has visited the museum," Rogers said, "and I am sure he will be pleasantly surprised by this wonderful accomplishment."

The museum will salute 50 years of logging in the province.

Land to Be Reclaimed From Dredge 'Spoils'

OTTAWA — Dredging of the approach channel to the assembly wharves at Nanaimo to facilitate the entry of large ships into the harbor will be undertaken this summer, Public Works Minister Arthur Laing announced today.

An additional benefit of the work will be the creation of some 13 acres of new land for the Nanaimo Harbor Commission behind the assembly wharves by utilizing the dredge spoil.

Ships following the channel into Nanaimo harbor must make a sharp turn to approach the wharves. The larger size of ships using the harbor has added to the difficulty pilots experience in docking.

The harbor commission has urged that this situation be remedied.

The widening of the approach channel and the right-angled turn will involve dredging a triangular area 1,500 feet long and with a maximum width of 650 feet to a depth of 30 feet below low water.

Last year two areas in the vicinity of the assembly wharves were dredged and the spoil used to create four acres of new land. This year's project will require the handling of almost three times the amount of loose material.

SPCA Told To Reinstate Man, Wife

NANAIMO (CP) — The reinstatement of two employees dismissed by the Society for The Prevention of Cruelty to Animals in October, 1968, has been authorized by the Labor Relations Board.

Reg Robertson, an inspector at the Nanaimo SPCA, and his wife, who maintained the answering service, were dismissed while applying for certification with the Canadian Union of Public Employees, Local 401.

The board directed the SPCA to reinstate the couple and pay them a sum equal to the wages lost by their discharge.

Robertson is to get $1,956 and his wife $310.

The board also ordered certification of the Canadian Union of Public Employees for employees in a unit composed of all SPCA employees in Nanaimo and surrounding districts.

Scurry Rainbow

North American Coal Corp. says its joint venture agreement with Scurry-Rainbow Oil Ltd. to prospect coal lands in British Columbia has been terminated and NACCO's investment in the project has been sold to Scurry-Rainbow.

Scurry-Rainbow holds 14 coal licences in one block in the south-eastern corner of B.C., and nine more licences a few miles away in the Elk Valley.

Home Oil Earnings

Home Oil Co. Ltd. had earnings of $1,291,000 or 20 cents a share during the first three months of 1969, compared with $1,477,000 or 29 cents a share during the same period a year ago.

The earnings were on a gross revenue of $6,735,000, up $319,000 from 1968.

During the period the company produced an average of 16,798 barrels of crude oil daily, up slightly from last year. Natural gas sales rose to 69,298,000 cubic feet a day.

Well Above Budget

The president of Gill Interprovincial Lines Ltd. told the annual meeting of shareholders Monday that revenue in the first quarter of 1969 was more than $3,000,000.

Esmond Lando said the revenue of the intercontinental trucking line was "well above budget."

The company had been in a non-profit period after "digesting" several acquisitions in 1968, including a Winnipeg-based trucking line and new terminals in Toronto and Ottawa, he said.

Inco Jumps Price

International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd. announced it has increased its price for copper to Canadian users to 50 cents a pound from 48.5 cents effective Monday.

This move follows announcements of similar price increases by Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting Co. Ltd. and Noranda Sales Corp. Ltd.

B.C. Sugar Refinery

British Columbia Sugar Refinery Ltd. and its subsidiary companies have reported consolidated earnings of $1,711,000 for the six months ended March 31 compared to $1,633,000 for the corresponding period last year.

Share earnings were $2.01 compared to $1.92 a share at the same time in 1968.

INTEGRATED circuitry, represented by the tiny wafer held by model in Canadian Westinghouse plant in Hamilton, is the secret to the latest in electronic equipment such as data processing machines. The single integrated unit, about a half-inch square, replaces all 50 transistors, diodes, resistors and capacitors in the pile.

Investors Compensated After Given False Advice

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Prince George company and two individuals were awarded $35,350 damages Tuesday for stock market losses resulting from false information given by a securities salesman.

Mr. Justice G. F. Gregory of British Columbia Supreme Court made the award against Norman H. Hocker, a salesman with James Richardson and Sons, Ltd., and against the company.

Ernest G. Kallweit, Stephen Bizicki and Central B.C. Planers Ltd. alleged that Hocker had breached a duty to his clients to advise them "carefully, faithfully, honestly and in good faith."

John McAlpine, acting for the plaintiffs, told the court Hocker called a meeting of his clients in Prince George Feb. 13, 1966, and advised them to purchase stock in Charter Oils Ltd. when the market opened the next day, a Monday.

Mr. McAlpine said the salesman advised his clients that a close friend had information about a well drilled by Pacific Petroleum, that an active well was indicated and the result could affect Charter Oils favorably.

The salesman was quoted as saying substantial buying orders had been placed by others.

Court was told Central B.C. Planers bought 10,000 shares for $65,170, Kallweit 800 for $4,320 and Bizicki 1,000 for $6,250.

The stock price dropped substantially later when the Pacific Petroleum well did not produce oil, the lawyer said.

He told the court that the company lost $29,830, Bizicki $2,822 and Kallweit $2,698.

Court was told the information given to Hocker was that someone else had flown over the Pacific Petroleum rig and "seen something blow."

North to Alaska For Cold Cash

By VICTOR KEEGAN
The Manchester Guardian

FAIRBANKS, Alaska — The lure of oil and the accompanying profits has brought oil companies to north Alaska in droves, and with them camp followers and fortune seekers. Suddenly Alaska, the largest and formerly most neglected state in the United States, has become the most sought after.

British Petroleum was in at the beginning and is, seemingly, one of the few so far to have struck it rich. The company, in which the British government has a 49 per cent interest, is reluctant to give details of its find until after it has bid for some leases nearby in September, but unofficial estimates suggest that it could be sitting on more than 5 billion barrels, each of which would yield a profit of a dollar when sold.

This is part of a concentrated attack on the U.S. market which has already led BP to buy 10,000 east coast filling stations.

The price of extracting Alaskan oil is for men to work in some of the most abominable conditions possible. Winter temperatures stay way below zero.

Alan Calderwood, BP's drilling superintendent on the North Slope, said that in January and February "it is very depressing, for there is no light at all. This brings out a tendency in human beings to hibernate, When it is dark all the time, you just want to sit down and do nothing."

The fierce cold confines the company's 10 permanent men to their Arctic huts (behind seven-inch walls), brought to the slope by giant Hercules aircraft, which land a few yards away on a runway of gravel and ice.

WOMEN FORBIDDEN

Drinking and gambling are forbidden and there are no women. One man told me: "There is no alternative but to live for the job, night and day, seven days a week, and then get the hell out of here when each leave comes up."

For BP officials this can mean a trip back to England, but to the 45-odd "roughnecks" and "cat skinners" (tractor drivers), who man and support each of the company's four rigs, it means blowing a lot of their enormous earnings in the nearest town, Fairbanks, a mere 400 miles away by jet.

Cat skinners, the unsung aristocrats of the slope, can earn up to $1,000 for a week of seven 12-hour days, and by all accounts earn every frostbitten cent of it. Most of the men on the rigs have migrated from the oilfields of Texas and Louisiana. Big, coarse, and cliquish, they work in the same team, wherever they are, and claim to be interested in nothing but the unrelenting pursuit of money.

Big earners for four weeks at a stretch, they then become big spenders for two weeks in Fairbanks. Today the town with its 14,000 inhabitants, is rapidly becoming a professional boom town which with bread at 60 cents a loaf, has some claim to being the most expensive place in the world.

Money Rifts Split Germans

BONN (Reuters) — A fierce debate erupted today in the West German legislature, exposing deep rifts over money policy in the Christian Democrat-Social Democrat coalition.

The unplanned debate delayed a cabinet meeting at which the government reviewed its no-revaluation decision last week—a decision disputed by some ministers.

The cabinet approved ways of squeezing speculators into taking out huge amounts of money that flowed into West Germany this month in a gamble that the international exchange value of the mark would be raised.

The government had refused Friday to revalue the mark upward and on Sunday promised a meeting of Western central bankers it would take steps against the speculators.

Chancellor Kurt Georg Kiesinger angrily denied in the Bundestag (lower house) today that the government was to blame for last week's speculative rush to buy marks.

"What rubbish," he told hooting deputies of the small Free Democrat party opposition.

Economics Minister Karl Schiller, a Socialist, warned the house that government plans to combat inflation could throw international bookkeeping further out of balance.

FACED RECRIMINATION

Finance Minister Franz Josef Strauss faced bitter recriminations over his remarks two weeks ago that West Germany expected to face demands for a revaluation of eight to 10 per cent.

Strauss was in open conflict with Schiller, and declared that revaluation is not the only way to achieve price stability.

The mark was strong in European money markets today as dealers waited to see what West Germany would do to back up its decision not to increase the international exchange value of its currency.

The measures included an indefinite extension of West Germany's increase in export taxes and its reduction in import duties. These were emergency measures taken last November when President de Gaulle of France refused to devalue the franc.

The West Germans also recommended measures to make currency speculation more expensive and the creation of a rainy-day economic fund from additional revenues generated by the current boom in West Germany.

The British pound and the French franc weakened on European markets today but the U.S. dollar and West German mark moved up on renewed buying in Zurich.

Few dealers in any financial centre, meanwhile, had strong praise for the additional "flanking measures" decided Tuesday by the West German economic cabinet to bolster Bonn's refusal to raise the value of the mark.

"This is just fiddling with the problem," one London dealer said.

The dollar reached a new high for the year in Zurich at 4.3372 Swiss francs against Tuesday's 4.3345. The mark reached 108.455 Swiss francs for 100 marks against 108.37 Tuesday.

In London, the pound opened at $2.38 4-5 but soon slid off to 2.38¾.

France May Purchase Canadian N-Reactors

• Romania Seeks Deal for Plant

OTTAWA (CP) — Crown-owned Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. has reopened efforts to sell a nuclear power plant to Romania with a revised proposal that includes a uranium refining plant, AECL President J. L. Gray said Tuesday night.

He told the Commons resources committee that active negotiations for sale of a nuclear plant are under way with Taiwan, a bid is being prepared for a plant in Italy and sales chances are being pursued in seven other countries.

Failure to get a working Canadian source of heavy water—a main component of Canadian-designed plant—is "a very sad story," Mr. Gray said.

All prospective customers for AECL's first foreign sale of a nuclear power system insist on a guaranteed supply of heavy water.

AECL will have to start importing heavy water from the United States in June at $28.50 a pound compared with a contracted price of an average $18.50 from delayed Canadian sources.

The U.S. heavy water will be needed for aid-supplied Canadian power plants in India and Pakistan and the station building at Pickering, Ont.

Mr. Gray said a bid earlier this year for a Romanian contract in competition with West German and British interests became invalid March 15. A new proposal was submitted last week at Romania's request.

The value of the new proposal —not yet a firm bid—would be greater than the $65,000,000 price tag on the first offer, but less than $100,000,000, Mr. Gray said outside the committee.

The original Canadian offer included a firm price on a 300,000-kilowatt power plant. The Romanians also were given a technical description of a plant of twice the capacity. The Canadian government had authorized a loan of $65,000,000 to support the deal.

The Romanians came back and asked for prices on a package including both power plants, a uranium refinery, a fuel fabrication plant and a heavy water production plant. Arrangements would have been required whereby Canadian firms licensed designs for ancillary plants.

Mr. Gray said AECL informed the Romanians the proposal was impractical. AECL is not in a position to provide some parts of the package, such as the refinery and heavy water plant. The package would have required Canadian loans to Romania of about $190,000,000.

After the original bid expired March 15, the Romanians asked for further talks.

Negotiations would probably continue for some weeks before a decision is made on whether to submit a firm bid, but "there is quite a good chance that we could get a project in Romania if we are prepared to take a big one," Mr. Gray told the committee.

PARIS (CP) — Le Monde says France is trying to decide between Canadian and United States reactors in planning future development of its nuclear-power program.

A Canadian-type reactor using heavy water and known as Candu seems to offer serious possibilities, the newspaper says, and France is showing an active interest.

Le Monde adds that the French ministry of research considers it important to take an interest in the Canadian model as a matter of priority.

The paper reports that the state electricity service and the Atomic Energy Commission are concerned about speeding realistic development of some kind.

The research ministry is said to view the matter in a political perspective, considering prevention of American domination a vital matter.

A meeting on the question, involving all interested French officials, might be held later this week, Le Monde reports, but a final decision will not result from it.

OVERHANG WORTH $270

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Frances Schlereth figured her rights were being violated when the Duquesne Light Co. put up a pole with a crossbar overhanging her property. On Monday, a judge agreed with her.

The company was ordered to pay Mrs. Schlereth $270 for violating six inches of air space above her property for 19 months, and to cut off the overhanging end of the crossbar.

Vancouver Eyes Computer Bank

VANCOUVER (CP)—Officials of the British Columbia School Trustees association were given details Tuesday of a proposed Greater Vancouver education data processing centre designed by two California experts.

Dr. Robert L. Howe, co-ordinator, Bureau of Systems and Data Processing, Sacramento, and Dr. R. Jack Totheroh, associate director of the bureau, prepared the program for the BCSTA on a $4,500 grant from the Education Research Institute of B.C.

The centre, with a leased computer and staff of 12 to 15, would cost about $200,000 a year to operate, Dr. Howe said.

He said a central co-ordinating centre would be far more efficient and economical than individual operations in area school districts.

Dr. Howe said about 18 of B.C.'s 84 districts now have some form of computerized data processing and another 20 are planning some shortly.

Dr. Totheroh said it is important for B.C. school districts and education department officials to make an early start on centralized computers to head off costly duplication of effort and spending.

Loss of Indian Schools Lamented

A federal government move to phase Indian schools out of existence is a growing concern to many Indian families on Vancouver Island.

They complain that they have not been consulted on the matter and they worry about the loss of instruction specifically oriented to the native people.

Also, because many existing federal schools for Indian children have been operated by religious bodies, some Indian parents believe they and their children are being separated from their churches.

On Vancouver Island the move affects Tsartlip Indian Day School on Saanich Peninsula, St. Catharine's Indian Day School at Duncan, Kuper Island Student Residence and Port Alberni Student Residence.

INTEGRATION

Under the new scheme Indian children will, as the plan develops, either attend [illegible] (separate) schools under racially-integrated conditions.

The changes followed passage of federal legislation last Feb. 1. The federal government will pay the provincial government the cost of Indian students' education where they move into the B.C. education service.

Most of the exclusively Indian schools on the Island have either been operated by the Catholic Church or operated for the federal government by Catholic instructors, usually nuns. The Port Alberni residential school is owned by the federal government but operated under auspices of the United Church.

TEACHER HIRING

No one knows how long it will be before Indian youngsters are fully integrated into public or parochial schools, but in the interim, all teachers have been classed as civil servants. Future hiring will be through Manpower on a competitive basis.

[illegible] school system believe this will result in a gradual withdrawal of religious groups in Indian schooling.

At Duncan today, Chief Dennis Alphonse of the Cowichan Band said his people are concerned because they mostly prefer an all-Indian school under church auspices.

"They gave us three alternatives, turn over the school to the public school system or to the (parochial) Queen of Angels School—or else take it over as a band-owned building to be used for some other purpose."

NO ALTERNATIVE

He said there was no alternative to sending the children to an integrated school.

"They (Ottawa) don't want to help us if we keep it as it is." He said he didn't think the school had to be closed right away, but "it's just a matter of time."

He said a general meeting of parents is to be held soon. [illegible]

Peninsula reserves which send children to the Tsartlip school are not as concerned as families in other areas.

Business manager for the Tsartlip band, Tom Sampson, does not see full integration being forced on this area for the foreseeable future.

He said representatives of the four Saanich bands met recently and voted to keep their segregated school open. He said the federal government promised to do so for as long as the people requested it.

KEEP IT OPEN

"We're going to keep it open as long as the people want it," said Sampson.

"As far as we are concerned, our teachers are as good as any others, perhaps better."

Phillip Paul, vocational counsellor at the Adult Institute and a spokesman on Indian affairs here, said "it is appalling that there has been no consultation . . . we cannot communicate."

He said the Tsartlip school will be permitted to remain open for a time only.

He said the Indian Act gives native parents the right to decide the form of education they wish for their children ". . . and we're going to stand on it."

He thought integration of Indian school children is inevitable but it must come about without hardship. He thought in the case of a residential school operated by civil servants there would be hardships because the children would have three supervisors, during three eight-hour shifts, where they now have one.

LAND-BUYING GRANTS PLANNED BY OTTAWA?

TORONTO (CP)—The Star says the federal government is planning legislation to pave the way for Ottawa to provide funds to municipalities to cover the total cost of buying and servicing land for future development.

The federal government now covers 75 per cent of the cost of land assembly.

The newspaper says in an Ottawa story the legislation is to prevent private land speculation, which the housing report prepared by Paul Hellyer, former transport minister, said was the major cause of rising land prices.

The 15-year loans will be made through provincial governments, avoiding possible complaint that the federal government is invading provincial jurisdiction, The Star says.

New Home Recipe Reducing Plan

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drug store and ask for four ounces of Naran Concentrate. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoons full a day as needed and follow the Naran Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

Clarence Says Clause Needed To Avoid Chaos

MONTREAL (CP) — A suggestion by a federal government "task force" on sport that would in effect curtail a hockey team's rights over an individual player came under heavy attack Tuesday by Clarence Campbell, National Hockey League president.

Campbell said the proposed legislation against the controversial reserve clause in professional hockey contracts would be "disastrous to all international leagues in all sports."

The report was tabled in the Commons Monday by Health Minister Munro. It called for, among other things, abolition of the clause "by legislation if necessary."

The reserve clause of the standard players' contract binds the player to a team until the team wants to trade him.

The "task force" report suggested that a player be allowed to play out his option in the final year of the contract and then be permitted to sell his services to any club.

Campbell told a news conference the recommendation itself will have no effect "by itself" since "personal employment contracts would be handled at the provincial level."

Neither does the U.S. government have any power in this field, he said.

The British North America Act gives the provinces jurisdiction over property rights and the NHL, being a service, falls under this category.

Football 'Regrets' Option Clause

The federal government could legislate against services, Campbell said, but this "would bring banks, service stations, restaurant outlets and laundries under the same legislation."

Consequently, all these services would fall under anti-trust laws. If the NHL were found guilty of anti-trust laws, it could result in the dissolution of the league, he said.

Both professional basketball and baseball clubs retain the reserve clause and only U.S. professional football teams have adopted the option clause.

And football commissioner Pete Rozelle has expressed regrets over the decision.

Such an arrangement, possible in the National Football League since all teams capable of signing a free agent fall under the jurisdiction of the single commissioner, would not work in professional hockey, Campbell said.

Under the proposed arrangement "it would be possible for a player to enter into a collusive agreement with an independent club which in turn could dispose of the player's services to a rival of the club from which the player defected."

Unlike professional football, not all professional hockey clubs fall under the jurisdiction of one authority.

Satisfaction in All Arbitrations

Campbell disagreed with the report's claim that it is unfair for the league president to be sole arbitrator in any salary dispute between a player and the club management.

He said the league's existing arbitration provision is "something less than ideal" but no practical alternative has been suggested.

In the 13 salary arbitrations in the last two years, satisfaction has been expressed in all cases by the players' legal representatives.

The NHL president added that the league agrees with the report's claim that the low draft age of 20 years can interfere with the player's education.

The league was studying a system under which university students would not be drafted until their graduating years.

Campbell said the "task force" was mistaken when it said a player can be fined for "indifferent play."

No club had the authority to fine a player, although a player could be suspended.

The league president said he does not think the "task force" wants the NHL to stop assisting the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association financially.

In May, 1967, the NHL, at the request of the CAHA, had agreed to terminate the sponsorship of all amateur teams and abolish all forms of agreement with amateur players.

No amateur player would be "turned professional" until he had exhausted his eligibility as a junior—under 20 years of age.

The "task force" report recommended that the NHL discontinue annual payments of $75,000 to the CAHA "to provide expanded administrative facilities of all kinds."

Campbell said the NHL is prepared to comply with the request as soon as an alternative source of income for the CAHA is available.

The "task force" recommended federal government grants as an alternative.

Cubs Fashioning Their Own Storm

Chicago Matches Record By Clubbing Pirates 19-0

(By The Associated Press)

Rod Carew's lightning crackled in the middle of a storm. Jim Northrup saved his thunder until after the rain. Chicago Cubs seem intent on hitting their baseball rivals with thunder and lightning in a continuous fashion.

The rampaging Chicago team reached some giddy heights with a record-tying 19-0 victory over San Diego Padres and are convinced they can win the National League pennant.

The Cubs tied the highest shutout score in modern National League history Tuesday as Dick Selma turned in the team's third straight shutout and Ernie Banks clouted a pair of three-run homers and drove in seven runs.

Ernie credited his big day to "his people."

"It was senior citizens' day," said the 38-year-old Cub, "and I had to give my people something to cheer about.

The only other homers Ernie has hit this season came in his first two times at bat opening day when his father, Ed Banks, was Ernie's guest.

The 19-0 triumph equalled the record set by the Cubs in 1906 against the New York Giants and equalled by Pittsburgh against St. Louis in 1961.

The record shutout was 28-0 by Providence over Philadelphia, Aug. 21, 1883.

Elsewhere in the National League Tuesday, San Francisco Giants trimmed Pittsburgh Pirates 11-8, Houston Astros rattled Montreal Expos 10-3, Cincinnati Reds dropped Philadelphia Phillies 6-4 and Atlanta Braves edged New York Mets 4-3. Los Angeles at St. Louis was rained out.

Cubs Four Games Ahead of Pack

Banks played only six innings.

Nate Oliver and Don Young also homered and Billy Williams contributed a pair of triples to the 15-hit Cub attack. Selma's shutout followed a blanking Sunday by Ken Holtzman and one Monday. Ferguson Jenkins of Chatham, Ont., and the combination of heavy hitting and airtight pitching has opened a four-game lead for Chicago in the Eastern Division.

The second-place Pirates got early homers by Richie Hebner and Bob Oliver, but saw the Giants explode for an eight-run fourth inning.

Bobby Bonds and Dick Dietz each contributed two-run single in San Francisco's big inning. Ken Henderson's leadoff homer and run-scoring singles by Willie Mays and Willie McCovey also did their share of the damage.

Carew's inside-the-park homer in the eighth inning led the Minnesota Twins to a 4-2 comeback victory over Baltimore Tuesday night in a rhubarb-filled meeting of American League division leaders.

Northrup's two-run homer in the seventh, following a long rain delay, carried the Detroit Tigers from behind to a 3-1 triumph over the Chicago White Sox.

Elsewhere, Oakland nipped Boston 5-4 in a duel between the AL's hottest clubs; Seattle downed the skidding New Yorkees 5-3; Washington edged California 2-1 in 10 innings and Cleveland outscored Kansas City 8-6.

Carew, the AL's top hitter, erased a 2-1 Baltimore lead by drilling a liner to the right centre field fence and following team-mate Cesar Tovar across the plate with a fadeaway slide that barely eluded catcher Elrod Hendricks, who insisted he had made the tag.

Moments earlier, Orioles manager Earl Weaver was ejected in a heated dispute over a balk called against losing pitcher Mike Cuellar following Tovar's leadoff single.

The Twins added another run before the inning was over and held on for their 11th victory in the last 13 games and a narrow edge over second-place Oakland in the West.

Rocks' Rookie Coach Not Quite a Stranger

By Western Lacrosse Association standards, Tom Druce rates as a rookie. But to most members of the Victoria Shamrocks team, their new coach looms as "an old hand".

Coach and team make their 1969 hometown debut tonight at Memorial Arena when the Rocks face Coquitlam Adanacs in the second of Victoria's three pre-season games for the Greenwood Trophy.

New Westminster Salmonbellies, rated the team to beat this year, shaded the Irish 17-15 in the opening game on the mainland.

Druce, though a rookie as a senior coach, isn't a stranger to his charges. Most, if not all, played for the one-time lacrosse and soccer standout when Druce piloted the junior Shamrocks a few seasons back.

THEY KNOW HIM

"It's not like we're all starting from scratch," said Tom. "Most of them were with me in junior, and they know what I expect of them."

For the moment, Druce's major expectation is running. The emphasis is on youth and young legs, and Druce pins greatest hope for success "on a running game."

Only two of the players who will dress tonight are more than 25 years of age. They are defencemen Bill Spotswood and Bob Harris.

Victoria's favorite brother combination — Ranjit and Nirmal Dillon — head the list of Shamrocks' holdovers. Ranjit has led the team in scoring in each of his three seasons with the Shamrocks. The sparkling defenceman scored 116 points last year.

THE LINEUPS

Nirmal, Don McNeill and Ken Alexander — also holdovers — form one line. Denis Somner, Tom Churchill and Charn Dhillon, all recent junior grads, will make up another.

The third line will consist of Jerry Baines, Martin Bellwood and Mel Galloway.

Owen Richmond and Al (Smokey) McLean will be Druce's utility players. Doug Thompson and George Grover will share Victoria netminding duties.

Game time tonight is 8:30.

John Sharpe Returns To Davis Cup Squad

TORONTO (CP) — John Sharpe, Australian-born tennis ace, says he will rejoin the Canadian Davis Cup team in London today at the invitation of team manager Fred Bolton of Vancouver.

Sharpe said Tuesday that Francois Godbout, a team member, "came back from Holland yesterday due to business reasons and informed me Bolton would like me to join the team for the second-round play against Russia in Moscow."

Sharpe will play in Moscow May 23-25, with Mike Belkin of Montreal, who won both singles and shared the doubles victory with Harry Fauquier of Toronto against Holland.

Other members of the team are Tony Bardsley and Bob Puddicombe, both of Vancouver.

Sharpe had been dropped from the team three weeks ago because of a disagreement with Bolton, but Canadian Lawn Tennis Association officials said Tuesday the difference between the two had now been "resolved."

Servicemen's Golf

The Canadian Armed Forces Golf Association's monthly medal tournament will be played Thursday at Glen Meadows. Starting times:

12 Noon—Langlois, Walters, Semple, Ramsey.
12:07 — Jackson, DeBolbe, Derrick, Brown.
12:15—A. Spencer, J. Spencer, Thomas, Hill.
12:22—Cormack, Davies, Gatto, Goms.
12:30—Hayden, Gibson, Sheplawy, Carveth.
12:45—Soward, Moore, Myers.

Hopping for Joy? Not This Bunny!

By The Canadian Press

The majority of Canadian athletes and sports officials seem pleased with recommendations of the study group on sport, but Bunny Ahearne and Avery Brundage are unimpressed.

Brundage, 81-year-old president of the International Olympic Committee, said in a telephone interview with The Telegram in Toronto Tuesday that Canada should abide by Olympic rules.

He was referring to a section of the report which says "the prevailing Olympic rules are unrealistic," and suggests Canada establish its own Olympic rules "according to our situation."

"Olympic rules are written by the representatives of 125 different countries throughout the world," said Brundage. "Until they're changed, they should be respected."

FEELS BETRAYED

Ahearne, czar of world amateur hockey, was angered that the report called him a "shrewd, garrulous and controversial gentleman," and said it was "odd that so much leadership direction rests in a man who has no real base beneath him in his own country (Britain) in terms of players and leagues."

"It is strange that I'm being attacked by a country I did a big favor for in Stockholm, when I helped push through the idea of allowing six pros to play in next year's tournament in Canada," said Ahearne in London, England.

Representatives of professional hockey players were elated with recommendation that the reserve clause in National Hockey League player contracts be replaced with an option clause.

Al Eagleson, a Toronto lawyer and legal adviser to the NHL Players' Association, said in a telephone interview from Frankfurt, Germany, it will "be good for hockey that the players have the right to play out their option."

Horse Bolted Back to Fire

CHERRY HILL, N. J. (AP) — Five horses, four of them race horses, were killed Tuesday when fire swept through a stable at Garden State Park.

The racing horses were identified as Ole Woman, winner of recent $7,500 race; Fulham, Warrior Prince and Sunny Ram.

The fifth horse killed was a training pony.

Cherry Hill police said the fire broke out in a one-storey stable which housed 56 horses. They said a stable hand led Ole Woman to safety but that the animal broke away and ran back into the flaming structure.

New Stamp Pilot Says He's Lucky

CALGARY (CP) — Jim Duncan's football philosophy is to get "the best from what you have," and he feels he has inherited a good team in Calgary Stampeders.

"Not every man is lucky enough to inherit a club like we have here," Duncan told a news conference Tuesday after he was appointed head coach of the defending Western Football Conference champions.

With six weeks until training camp, the former assistant coach with Saskatchewan Roughriders plans now to determine what the Stampeders can do.

He indicated he doesn't agree with his predecessor Jerry Williams that the pass is the shortest path to a touchdown.

Williams, who led the Stampeders to the Grey Cup game last year, left last week to sign a three-year contract with Philadelphia Eagles of the National Football League.

Duncan, a 44-year-old native of North Carolina, noted that Williams could afford to favor the pass because he had passing wizard Peter Liske as his quarterback. But Liske is gone to the NFL and Duncan is left with Jerry Keeling and Bill Redell at quarterback.

Both Keeling and Redell, obtained last week for lineman Dick Suderman in a trade with Hamilton Tiger-Cats, have served mainly as defensive halfbacks recently.

CITY SPORTSMAN
ROD HENDRY DIES

One of Victoria's best-known bowling personalities, Rod Hendry, died suddenly Tuesday morning.

A native of Lethbridge and one-time schoolteacher, Hendry came to Victoria in 1954 to manage Gibson's Bowladrome.

He remained as Gibson's manager until 1964, when he left to launch his own business in Esquimalt, operating the Trophy Shop and Esquimalt Billiards. He recently sold controlling interest in the two firms.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

PAPER ATTACKS RUSSIAN COACH

Tarasov on Hot Seat

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet newspaper Sovetsky Sport today attacked Russia's national hockey team coach and raised the question of whether he should be fired.

The coach, Anatoly Tarasov, has led the Soviet team to seven straight world championships, including this year at Stockholm.

Sovetsky Sport said Tarasov behaved badly Sunday by delaying a game between army, which he coaches when not occupied with the national team, and Spartak.

Tarasov held up the televised game 35 minutes in the third period when a goal by his team was disallowed.

Spartak won 3-1 and took the Soviet national championship. Sovetsky Sport said that Tarasov had made "mistakes" before and reacted to criticisms as if it were personal insults.

"Is he worthy to remain the national coach?" the paper asked.

SALE OF NEVELE PRIDE TO SET MONEY RECORD

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Trainer-driver Stanley Dancer has confirmed reports that Nevele Pride, Horse-of-the Year in harness racing for the last two years, may soon be syndicated for a record $3,000,000.

Dancer said negotiations to sell the four-year-old horse are under way with Stoner Creek Stud, Inc., of Paris, Ky. Businessman Norman Woolworth heads the purchasing organization.

The highest price previously paid for a standardbred is $2,000,000 for three-year-old Bret Hanover, in 1967.

Nevele Pride won more than $650,000 in his last two seasons of racing.

Simpson, Corby Shoreline's Best

Ian Simpson won four events and Delma Corby took three firsts to capture individual aggregate honors in the Shoreline Junior High School track and field meet.

Simpson won the 100, 220 and 440 yard runs and the triple jump to beat out Pete Tyrrell in the senior boys' division.

Miss Corby won the 220, 440 and 880 to edge Brenda Fisher for senior girls' honors.

Randy Jackson edged Jesper Lind for junior boys' honors while Pat Olson took the midget crown over Ron Alexander.

Sandy Price and Colleen Orr finished 1-2 in the junior girls' aggregate race while Evonne Vliet beat out Roberta Barker for the midget laurels.

Cobra House edged Stingray, 608-601, to claim the house championship.

Biggest Bates Belt Molsons

Bate Construction's big men are Harvey Stevenson and Brian Pearce, who, together, push the weigh-scale indicator dangerously close to the 450-pound mark.

Together, they muscled Bates to a 3-0 victory over Molsons on Tuesday and back into the undisputed leadership of the Major Men's Softball League.

Pearce, surviving a last-inning threat, checked Del Bertrand's tough Molsons on four hits, including a pair in the final inning.

LEADOFF HOMER

The muscular Stevenson sparked Bates' three-run uprising in the fourth inning with a leadoff homer. A walk to Doug Gregory, Don Lancaster's single, Jim Moody's sacrifice fly, and an error pushed around the other runs.

Lancaster collected two of Bates' six hits in a game that featured sharp fielding on the part of both clubs. Bates reeled off two double plays and Molsons one.

Poirier, Big Bats Humble Denfords

Canadian Forces Base Combos received a steady pitching performance from Ken Poirier and solid hitting all the way down the line to move to the top of the Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League class on Tuesday.

Combos remained the only undefeated entry by routing previously-unbeaten Denford Electric 11-2 at Heywood Avenue Park.

Poirier checked Denfords on nine hits, striking out five and walking two.

Combos' 11-hit attack included a home run by George Fisher and successive triples by Joe Johnson and Jack White. Barry Granger collected three hits, including a double, while Fisher, Johnson and Dale Frost each pounded out a pair.

Denfords contributed to their downfall by committing five errors and stranding 10 base runners.

President Leads

President Al Wright showed other members of the Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association how it should be done during the club's monthly fishing competition.

Al captured the April trophy by landing a 28-pound salmon. Winner of the women's trophy was Betty Wright, no relation to the club prexy.

Lacrosse Film

Lacrosse invades the provincial museum Friday, but nobody is worried about exhibits.

Victoria Minor Lacrosse Association will show a boxla film in the museum theatre. The flickers start at 8 p.m. and all interested players and their parents are invited to attend.

APPOINTED coach of Fort Worth club in Central Hockey League is Doug Barkley, 32, former defenceman with Detroit Red Wings whose playing career was ended in 1966 by eye injury.

SKATING PRESIDENT

CALGARY (CP) — Douglas Peckinpaugh of Edmonton has been elected president of the Canadian Figure Skating Association for a two-year term.

Eyes on Dynamic Scot As OKs Tackle Albion

Eyes of friend and foe alike will be on Danny Hegan tonight at Royal Athletic Park.

Hegan is the dynamic little Scot who has just been acquired by West Bromwich Albion and who is slated for midfield action when the English League soccer side tangles with Victoria's O'Keefes at 8 o'clock.

Albion gave up a bundle of cash and forward Ian Collard to get the 25-year-old Scottish international from Ipswich in what has been estimated as a $250,000 deal and Hegan will undoubtedly play a key role in West Bromwich plans for next season.

He made his first appearance with his new team Sunday at Vancouver as Albion tripped the B.C. All-Stars 2-0 on a pair of penalty goals. Manager Alan Ashman, wanting to see more of his new star, has promised Hegan will be in tonight's starting lineup.

Ashman also intends to start 17-year-old Gordon Nesbitt in goal and forward Richard Krzywicki, who rejoined the club Monday after playing with the Welsh international side.

TREMENDOUS PLAYER

Ashman hasn't decided on his full starting roster but says he will dress all of his 16 players, including halfback Tony Brown, who helped the "Throstles" to their FA Cup triumph in 1968.

Victoria coach Bill Abbott will also have an eye on Hegan, hoping to find a method to contain the agile, hard-shooting Scot.

"Whatever they paid for him, he's worth every penny," Abbott commented after watching Hegan in action at Vancouver Sunday. "He's no bigger than our Dunc McCaig, but he's a tremendous player and proves there's a place for the small man in this game."

DEFENSIVE STYLE

Abbott was disappointed with the defensive style adopted by the B.C. All-Stars that contributed to a dull exhibition.

"The fans here will see a much better game," Bill said. "We'll play our usual open game and I hope to get all the boys into the game."

Abbott plans to start with Kjeld Brodsgaard in goal with Brian Robinson, Howie Anderson, Peter Robarts and Ray Telford on the defensive line.

Bruce Twamley and Peter Brett will be the link men with Ike MacKay, McCaig, Peter Stoffers, and Bert Soutar working as attackers.

In reserve will be Dave Stothard, Peter Wheaton, Gil McIlraith, George Paul, Dick Joyce and goalie Barry Sadler.

All Contestants Hope For Big Dose of Luck

Doctors and druggists can suggest all sorts of remedies for aches and pains, but they still haven't discovered a cure for such things as hooks and slices on the fairways.

That means they will once again have to trust in luck Thursday when they stage their annual doctors, druggists and travelers (DDT) tee tournament at Royal Colwood Golf and Country Club.

All will be hoping for a bigger dose of luck than usual on the short seventh hole because tournament officials have announced that Peter Pollen will present a car to any contestant who scores a hole-in-one on the seventh.

Here are Thursday's starting times:

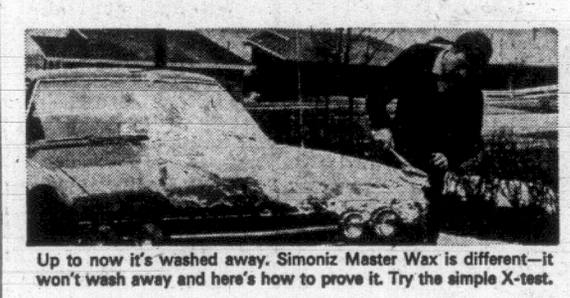
Ever wondered where the wax goes?

When you wash your car with soap and detergent?

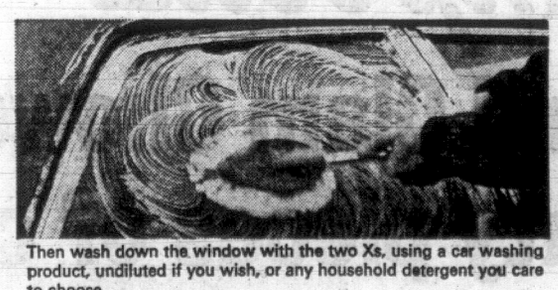


Up to now it's washed away. Simoniz Master Wax is different—it won't wash away and here's how to prove it. Try the simple X-test.

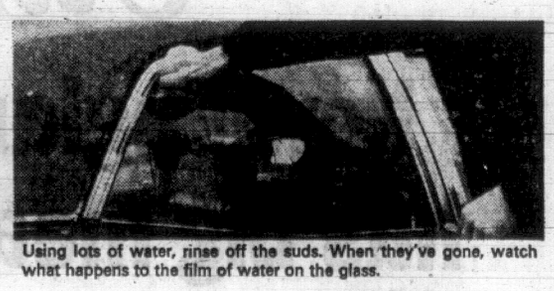
On one of the side windows, wipe a large letter X with Simoniz Master Wax. (The test shows up best on glass, but the effect is exactly the same on car finish.)

Next to the X you make with Master Wax, make another X using any brand of polish you like. Then allow to dry.

Now carefully polish up the Xs only, using cheesecloth or a soft linen rag—don't spread the wax around. (Notice how easy Master Wax is to apply and to buff up!)



Then wash down the window with the two Xs, using a car washing product, undiluted if you wish, or any household detergent you care to choose.



Using lots of water, rinse off the suds. When they've gone, watch what happens to the film of water on the glass.

There will be no trace of the X made by the other brand of wax. But the X you made with Simoniz Master Wax will still be there, actually pushing the water away from it. Breathe on the window, and you will find that it is clearly visible. This shows how new Simoniz Master Wax goes on protecting the finish long after other waxes have gone. Wash time and time again: it won't wash off because it's detergent resistant. (If you really want to remove the Master Wax 'X', a little Simoniz Liquid Kleener will do it.)

Available in liquid, pre-softened paste and aerosol.

U.S.S.R. and Red China Strengthen Border Forces

By HARRISON E. SALISBURY

TOKYO (NYT) — Far Eastern intelligence analysts report that the Soviet Union and Communist China have substantially strengthened their military capability along the 4,500-mile common frontier.

With the steady rise in tensions, the increase in frontier clashes and extreme strain in governmental relations, each side has taken precautionary steps, according to these analysts.

They say that some of the moves date back one and two years, and others have been more recent and seem to be related to the possibility of a radical worsening of relations in the not-distant future.

One of the dangerous aspects of the situation, in the view of the analysts, is that each side now is reported to mount a nuclear presence not far from the other's frontier. Whether such arms may be employed in actual conflict no one can be certain, but the Russians have insisted for several years that once China got the atomic bomb it would use it.

Strong in North

Since the Korean War, Peking has maintained its largest, most modern concentration of military strength in Northern China and Manchuria, according to the intelligence people. These forces originally were designed to meet any new threat from the United States, they say.

Now, reportedly reinforced and somewhat redeployed in the direction of the Ussuri and Amur rivers, the forces constitute the most powerful Chinese army grouping in existence today.

Chinese concentrations in the northwest, where there have been small clashes with the Russians along the Sinkiang frontier, have not been substantially reinforced, analysts report. The believe the Chinese are not likely to deploy major forces on the Sinkiang frontier because of the ease with which the Russians could cut off the Chinese.

Forced Labor

Instead the Chinese, it is reported, have brought into Sinkiang the army's production and construction corps. These forces are made up of soldiers and of forced labor. They are employed in farming and construction tasks but, being deployed throughout the region, are readily available as reserve military units in case of emergency, the analysts say. Similar forces are said to have been deployed in two other sensitive areas—Inner Mongolia and Manchuria.

The build-up of Soviet forces on the long frontier has gone forward steadily over the last 18 months, according to the intelligence quarters. The Soviet forces are elite troops, excellently equipped and disciplined.

One of the sharpest impressions conveyed by a new Chinese propaganda film, "The Anti-Chinese Crimes of the New Czars," is the excellence and variety of equipment possessed by the Soviet forces. The Chinese film shows Soviet border troops in varying actions. Whether the scenes are summer or winter, Soviet forces lack for nothing in the way of most modern weaponry and technology.

New Gunboats

Soviet gunboats on the Amur and Ussuri are of late design and heavily armored.

These are supported by modern cutters equipped with light weapons. The Russians employ helicopters both for patrolling and back-up purposes. In the winter sequences the Russians are revealed to be even more powerfully armed. One sequence shows low-profile 40-ton to 60-ton tanks manoeuvering in heavy snow and ice. The Russians also use armored vehicle carriers, mobile radio and wireless communication equipment and winterized helicopters.

Fulbright Charges War News Secrecy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration has put a security label on some Vietnam information—and other matters—that has subsequently been leaked to news media, says Senator J. W. Fulbright (Dem. Ark.).

The senator said Monday that Defence Secretary Melvin Laird refused Fulbright's request to remove a secrecy ban on some Vietnam information given the Senate foreign relations committee.

The information concerned U.S. offensive moves and included a discussion of North Vietnamese infiltration, Fulbright said. Two days later, he said, Dr. John S. Foster Jr., Pentagon research chief, disclosed that the sensor system which monitors infiltration was a major technical advance in the war.

Also, Fulbright said Monday, in the downing of the navy intelligence aircraft by North Korean jets, a Pentagon representative was reluctant to discuss even off the record what already had appeared in a news magazine.

OXFORD, England (Reuters)—An American air force pilot died Monday after pulling his stricken jet fighter away from a playground full of schoolchildren. The Voodoo jet fighter crashed in flames 200 yards from the school at nearby Steeple Ashton.

No Assault If It's Not Felt

MONTREAL (CP) — Spitting on a constable's pants is not an assault on a policeman, in the view of Judge Emmett McManamy.

In dismissing charges against motorist Giuseppe LoMuto in municipal court, the judge upheld the defence contention that the assault charge was unwarranted since the constable could not feel the saliva hitting his trousers.

The policeman had issued a traffic ticket to the 24-year-old accused and was walking away when the incident occurred last Oct. 10.

Health Deputy Retires

OTTAWA (CP) — Dr. J. N. Crawford, 63, deputy minister in the health and welfare department since 1965, is retiring early for health reasons. The doctor announced Tuesday that he will leave the department next month "or as soon as a replacement can be found."

Baggage Problem Remains Major Bug in Air Travel

NEW YORK (CP) — Normally the millions of persons who fly North American airlines each year arrive at an airport, wait up to an hour, pick up their baggage and head for home.

But the operation is not always—for want of other words—this smooth.

Sometimes, the passengers find that the baggage they thought they had brought with them is in Madrid or Minneapolis. Or it had landed in the hands of a thief or perhaps has been mistakenly taken by a fellow passenger to Oshkosh or Weehawken, or some other out-of-the-way place.

Airline companies here admit that one of their major problems, one that is expected to get worse before it gets better, is baggage handling.

They say the problem of lost, stolen or strayed baggage will not be helped when massive jumbo jets disgorge as many as 360 passengers at a time into a terminal. And they blanch when they consider the confusion caused by the arrival of several of these jets at one time at one airport.

The airlines say that the overwhelming majority of passengers have no trouble in picking up their baggage at the terminal. Some veteran air travellers say they never have had trouble.

ADMIT TO PROBLEMS

But the airlines admit that some 2,000,000 American travellers have baggage problems yearly.

The situation is not helped by the fact that many suitcases look alike, in shape and color. Thus the possibility of a passenger taking the wrong suitcase is high.

Some veteran travellers get around this by affixing some distinctive object to their cases.

Another problem is thievery. A couple of airlines here now have guards at the gate and make passengers show their baggage checks as they pass out. One airline says that a combination of guards and television monitors has cut thefts by two-thirds.

Another airline is considering a computerized system for baggage handling which it says should help speed up the operation and check thefts and mistakes.

But most were not optimistic for the immediate future.

Said one spokesman:

"Five years from now, you'll still be hearing about the guy who has breakfast in Paris, lunch in New York, dinner in San Francisco and baggage in Rio de Janeiro."

Grits Support Civil Service Bargaining

By ERIC MAURICE

Victoria Liberal Association Tuesday heard calls for a provincial department of rehabilitation and for collective bargaining for B.C. Civil Servants.

Robert Dudley, managing director of Goodwill Enterprises, said the best way to get many of the province's 100,000 welfare recipients into meaningful employment is through "the new and proven techniques of professional rehabilitation."

Present vocational rehabilitation by local committees operating in teams has produced good results, he said.

The Victoria committee last year had 229 referrals. Only 20 were found unfit for any kind of assessment, training and placement.

Seventy-five were placed in gainful employment, and the others went on to training programs or were carried over into 1969 as active cases.

NOW TAXPAYERS

"Almost a third of the new referrals in 1968 are now taxpayers rather than tax users." This shows most people on social assistance are anxious to better themselves and pay their own way, he said.

Dudley said his proposed rehabilitation department should expand the local rehabilitation committees "to deal with all the vocationally crippling conditions with which British Columbian social assistance recipients are afflicted."

He criticized the secondary school academic and occupational programs for producing graduates with no marketable job skills.

Dudley said too many students are assigned to the occupational program. He called it an "academic garbage can." Students could be assigned to it for disciplinary problems, for example.

He called the occupational certificate "a ticket to oblivion."

COUNSEL NEEDED

Vocational counsellors are needed in the schools, and they should have experience in the labor market-place. They don't need teaching certificates, he said.

Also at the meeting, held to discuss Liberal policies for the next provincial election, truck driver Herbert Holland said "It would be good for morale" if B.C. government employees were given collective bargaining.

He said. "There is a lot of unhappiness."

Holland, who is national vice-president, western, of the Association of Department of National Defence Employees, said moral is higher among his co-workers since the federal government gave collective bargaining rights.

LONG LOOK

Holland said "the Liberal party as a whole should take a long look at winning over the labor vote."

He said it is wrong to assciate all labor with the NDP.

Local Liberals will hold a policy workshop at Uvic May 31 to discuss economic development and conservation, intergovernmental relations, education and social justice without socialism.

Prison for Trafficker

VANCOUVER (CP) — Eugene Dale, 35, was sentenced Tuesday to five years in prison after pleading guilty to trafficking in heroin. Magistrate Gordon Johnson was told Dale sold 25 caps of heroin to an RCMP undercover officer last November in a downtown night club.

MEASLES EPIDEMIC EXPECTED NEXT YEAR

WASHINGTON (AP)—Government health authorities are organizing a crash program to immunize 8,000,000 people against a predicted epidemic of German measles this winter.

Dr. David J. Sencer, director of the National Communicable Disease Centre, says the disease reaches epidemic proportions every six or seven years. He has asked Congress for an appropriation of $9,600,000 for the program.

Emigration Into U.S. To Show Marked Drop

By ROD CURRIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — The number of Canadians seeking to emigrate to the U.S. is up slightly from 1968 but present indications are that the total admitted this year will be about 20,000—the lowest in the last 10 years.

A paperwork bottleneck caused by the controversial immigration ceiling imposed last July 1 on residents of all Western Hemisphere countries is blamed for the slowdown. Canada and other hemisphere countries are limited to an annual combined total of 120,000 visas to men, women and children on a first-come, first-serve basis.

State department statistics show that 12,899 Canadians were granted visas between last July 1 and March 31 this year—a 64-per-cent drop compared with the 20,085 granted in the corresponding period a year earlier.

If this trend continues, as expected, only about 20,000 Canadians will have received visas in the fiscal year ending June 30. In the year ending last June, visas were granted to 29,536 Canadians.

A state department spokesman emphasized, however, that an additional 10,000 or so Canadians have applied for visas, making the total of applications more than 2,000 greater than the number granted in the corresponding period of the previous year.

APPLIED TOO LATE

The hitch is that this additional 10,000 did not get the paper work in motion until after last Oct. 1—and so far visa office employees are processing only applications made before that date. Several thousand of these Canadians will be left over for next year's quota because their applications will not be approved before the June 30 fiscal deadline.

With only two months left before the end of the fiscal year, there still are about 18,000 of the ceiling 120,000 visas left. However, the spokesman said the final total of hemisphere immigrants would come to within a handful of the ceiling.

The spokesman said that because of higher health and education standards, and less security risk, the actual processing of Canadian applicants takes considerably less time than for many applicants from other countries. However, because of the first-come, first-serve regulation, thousands of Canadians encounter long delays in working up through the queue.

Since 1965, all immigrants to the U.S. have been admitted only if it is deemed that no American worker will be displaced.

MUST SHOW PROOF

Unskilled or semi-skilled workers have to demonstrate that they have such a job awaiting them. However, many professional people in great demand in the U.S.—particularly doctors and nurses—are admitted simply on proof of their training, without advance guarantee of a job.

The projected total of about 20,000 Canadian immigrants this year compares with—in round figures—24,000 10 years ago. The figure gradually climbed to a peak of 40,000 in 1965 and then plunged the following year to 25,000. It dropped again to about 24,000 in 1967 before climbing to the 29,536 figure last year.

Meanwhile, U.S. immigration to Canada has been climbing steadily in recent years—to 29,422 last year from about 19,000 the previous year and 17,000 in 1966.

Social Aid Total

DUNCAN — Social assistance was disbursed in April to aid 172 persons for a total of $11,023, city council was told Monday night.

The amount is consistent with other months this year. A total of 47 families with 117 dependents received $7,930.

Twenty-three single women received $1,582; 19 single men got $1,238; 10 transients received $134 and three boarding home cases received $127.

Before the Magistrate

Can an admitted thief be found guilty of receiving the stolen article from himself?

This question arose Tuesday in central court and to Magistrate William Ostler posed "a very interesting difficulty." He remanded the case concerned to today to consider the point.

John Walker, 770 Market, had pleaded not guilty to possession of a stolen radiator.

During his trail he took the witness stand and said he broke into his brother's warehouse and stole the radiator.

He said he took it in lieu of wages owed to him for some work done for his brother.

Evidence during the trial was that the accused sold the radiator to a junk shop for $4 about an hour after it was last seen in the warehouse.

The building showed signs the front door had been "jimmied" or forced open.

At the end of the evidence Ostler referred to a higher court case which said the thief could not receive stolen property from himself. He said he wanted to review the case.

A woman who tried to get a refund on a dress earlier reported stolen from the Bay pleaded guilty to attempted false pretences.

Joan Matvenko, 1936 Bowker, was fined $100.

"What a foolish woman to ruin her reputation to try and get $18," said Magistrate Ostler.

Det. Lorne Johnson said the woman attempted to get the refund Monday. The dress, which Bay officials said was the only one like it in town, was stolen Saturday, Johnson said.

Mrs. Matvenko admitted being in the store Saturday and said she found it among her parcels when she got home.

The detective said she intended to bring it back but on the advice of her friends tried to get a refund.

"It's a serious offence and must be deterred," said Ostler.

A sailor who stole tools from another sailor's motorcycle was fined $75.

Richard Bennett, 19, pleaded guilty and was also placed on a $100 one-year good behavior bond. He was ordered to surrender his driver's licence to the Esquimalt police chief and not to drive for six months.

He was seen by a Dockyard commissionaire taking the articles, valued at about $15, near midnight April 5. He told police he took them to replace ones stolen from him earlier.

"Do you feel you're justified in stealing from an innocent person," asked the magistrate?

"You can see how absurd that is."

Joseph Carlson, 22, of 837 Bay was jailed for six months for possession of marjuana. He pleaded guilty earlier.

Magistrate Ostler said the accused's pre-sentence report was disturbing and he seemed to be unconcerned about it.

"If I were you I would be very alarmed instead of taking it in such a casual manner."

Ostler said drugs appeared to have had a profound effect on Carlson and that his reliability and dependability decreased as his use of drugs increased.

He said he would recommend the man be sent to a forestry camp.

Glen Hassard, 23, of 2540 Quadra, was fined $350 for dangerous driving.

Court was told he was involved in an accident at Mason and Quadra April 27. Police said his speed prior to the crash was 65 to 70 mph. Skidmarks 198 feet long were left on the road after he passed a car on the right at the intersection. He also wiped out a street sign and struck a parked car. Damage totalled $3,500 but no one was injured.

Magistrate Ostler told the youth his driving was quite outrageous and had there been any previous convictions he would have gone to jail.

Michael Banfield, 1030 Fairfield, was fined $300 for impaired driving. Donald Amstutz, 2655 Sooke, was fined $350 on the same charge.

$132,000 Damages In Fight

VANCOUVER (CP) — Damages totalling $132,000 were awarded Tuesday in British Columbia Supreme Court to three men seriously injured in a fight in 1964 in the Fraser Valley community of Mission.

Bhag Toore, who was left a permanent paraplegic, was awarded $125,000. Saudagar Toore received $5,000 and Joginder Kaila $2,000.

The award, one of the largest of its type ever made in B.C., was against Kehar Braich, Jagdev Sidhu, Balwinder Sidhu and Gurnam Sandhu.

The plaintiffs claimed the four defendants attacked them with fists, boots, and pickaroons, a type of logging hand tool.

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, MAY 14, 1969 —PAGE 25

Arthur Mayse

Back when I was struggling like a fly in molasses to spring myself from a Vancouver high school, my future was an open book. I would work reasonably hard, save my money, and retire at age 40 to a foreshore shack near Campbell River.

There, with a dog for company, a boat on the beach and a salmon rod leaned handy to my plank door, I would enjoy my declining years.

Although I didn't realize the fact at the time, my plan left much to be desired. For one thing, it failed to include the wife and children without whom shack, beach, boat and all the rest would be as nothing. It also overlooked a human reality that time and experience have impressed on me. This is that of all double-edged gifts to covet, retirement at 40 . . . or 50 . . . or 60 . . . is the one least worth having.

If you're young, you may not believe this. I didn't, until it was impressed on me by the circumstances of a free-lance writer's life.

It was a good life in many ways, but at intervals it left me with time on my hands.

There are some writers who have no sooner exhausted one idea than they're busy on the next. I envy them their disciplined approach, but it didn't work for me. There was always a gap between stories. If I'd turned out a book-length, the fallow period that followed might last for half a year.

★

And that time off—that enforced holiday—taught me to greet the end of a work-session with mixed feelings.

It was great for a while. We went fishing. We hooked and sliced happily around golf courses less crowded than the weekend would find them. But my wife had her own work to do, and presently I would realize yet again that work is one of man's necessities.

Then, soon or late, a story idea would click, and I would be happily bashing my typewriter again.

But the lesson stuck, and I remain deeply sorry for the man who yearns for work with all his being and is denied a job.

One of the wrongest, cruellest features of our society is that so often it condemns good men to that fate.

On the surface, the man who is pensioned out of the armed forces in his forties has it made. This is so only if he can find new work to fill his days. One of the rarely-mentioned tragedies of our city and our times is that so many retired servicemen are unable to do so.

For their well-being, and for the sake of every middle-aged unemployed man with a will to hold a job, I could wish the "over 40" barrier torn down wherever it exists.

It was youthful folly that caused me to set that age, which I left behind a good few years ago, for retirement.

★

Then when should a man retire?

In the ideal society which we are still far from achieving, I think he will be encouraged to work until he feels that he's ready to down tools. But he should also be given a chance to return should he find that freedom from the Monday-through-Friday work routine isn't to his taste!

Even when he has reached the standard retiring age of 65, many a man would be only too glad for a reprieve.

A couple of weeks ago, I talked to a veteran school principal who surely should welcome the day when he won't be burdened with the complexities of a demanding job. His number is coming up in a year or two. I asked him if he was looking forward to his freedom. He gave me a lemony smile, and said, "I dread it."

Any number of times in recent years, science has predicted a computerized world in which a few will work, while the rest absorb culture or merely pass their days in idleness.

Unless science can also free future men of the need to work, that life would be hell on earth.

ROSY-CHEEKED ROADRUNNERS of Blanshard Elementary School are still waiting for playground at their new school—but in the meantime they have their own private street. This section of Blanshard, closed to traffic, will become part of urban renewal housing project. In the meantime it's fine for spring sports practice, even if the hastily-drawn lane lines are wriggly. Only problem—backtop bruises and scrapes worse than grass. (Times photo by Bill Halkett.)

PRISON FAST

Seventeen Pounds Lighter

By JOHN SLINGER

Muriel Azmier, "on top of it" but about 20 pounds lighter, was released from Oakalla Prison Farm today after her 14-day sentence was shortened three days for good behavior.

The 57-year-old Ottawa grandmother and Betty Andrews, the 22-year-old Victoria mother of a nine-month-old son, came out of jail in as good spirits as they entered it May 3.

They chose the jail term rather than pay $50 fines for taking part in an anti-war sit-in at HMC Dockyard.

Mrs. Azmier refused to take solid food during her stay in Oakalla. A veteran peace marcher and champion of non-violence, she said she received "every care and consideration" as she subsisted on water.

LOST 17 POUNDS

Speaking from Vancouver, Mrs. Azmier said her longest previous fast had been five days and even then she took fruit juices.

She neglected to get weighed "in the excitement" of getting out this morning, but estimated her 11 days of nothing but water drained away between 17 and 20 pounds.

Mrs. Andrew had been treated well, said Mrs. Azmier. The younger woman was returning today to her son here. She stayed in a cabin with young people at Oakalla and worked on a gardening crew.

Mrs. Azmier said there was only "a small confrontation" during her stay.

SPIRITUAL STRENGTH

The prison staff didn't know quite how to deal with a person on a fast. Their only previous experience had been with Doukhobors and they would have preferred to see their new prisoner kept in hospital.

"They were unhappy for a day or two until they were assured that I had the spiritual strength to keep on top of it."

Spiritual strength was no problem, she added. "One doesn't fast with hostility.

"Unless you do it with love and understanding, it won't work. And you'll probably get sick."

She estimated it will take some two week's rest with friends in Vancouver for her physical strength to be restored.

HOLD WORK SHOPS

Then she plans to review the recent happenings and study some more non-violence, she said. Mrs. Azmier and her husband are likely to return to Ottawa for the summer where she expects to present non-violent workshops.

Mrs. Azmier said she would like someday to return to Victoria, "as we all would in the evening of our lives," but she says she can't settle anywhere "with the world's children in such danger."

The Vietnam war is her biggest foe, but she speaks of "the utter horror and futility of any war.

Hydro Starts Bi-Monthly Meter Checks

B.C. Hydro will read most customers' meters every other month in a streamlining move aimed at greater economy.

Customers will continue to be billed monthly with the interim bill based on average consumption adjusted for the season. Any difference between the interim billing and actual consumption will be adjusted on billings the month meters are read.

Large commercial and industrial accounts will still have monthly readings and for customers on the budget payment plan there will be no changes.

NO JOB LOSSES

For customers whose average cost of electricity and gas is under $6 monthly, there will be only a bill every second month when their meter is read.

There are about 14 meter readers covering Greater Victoria and none will lose their jobs as a result of the change, said personnel manager H. H. Lindstrom.

Their work routine will be adjusted but details will have to await the change next month.

In Vancouver a company spokesman said savings in postage alone for the 650,000 customers will be substantial. Information letters on the change are being mailed out at the rate of about 30,000 a day.

Highly Respected City Contractor Dies at 73

A highly respected Victoria contractor who built scores of homes in the Victoria area during his many years of business died Tuesday evening.

Victor Llewellyn [illegible], 3200 Beach Drive, became more than a contractor to his many customers, taking a personal interest in the growing families that bought his houses.

Born in Victoria, he was 73 when he died.

He is survived by his wife, Mary, a brother, Byron, also of Victoria; a sister, Mrs. Llewella Snodgrass of Stanford, Conn., and nieces and nephews.

Funeral service is privare.

Fun Weekend Starts Friday

It's that time of year again.

Beginning this Friday, Victoria will erupt with the annual Victoria Day celebrations—a special one this year because it is the 150th anniversary of Queen Victoria's birth.

Grade V students throughout the city will participate in the annual birthday "party" at the legislative buildings, organized by the IODE in conjunction with Greater Victoria school board. It starts at 10:45 a.m.. Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson will address the children for the first time.

For the Victoria Day parade, Monday, there are entries from all over British Columbia and the northwestern United States.

Portland is sending its rose festival float and Seattle will have its police drill team on hand.

The 48 bands participating range from the Mt. Vernon High School Bulldog Marching Band to the Silver Threads Kitchen Band.

The parade will be slightly shorter than the 1968 show but will feature more floats.

•

There are 50 floats in this year's parade which has the theme, "children's fantasy".

Oscar Peterson, Canada's internationally-known jazz pianist, is honorary parade marshal.

He is also the featured performer at the Jaycee fair which opens Monday immediately after the parade.

Prior to the parade, which starts from the Mayfair Shopping Centre at 10 a.m., spectators along the Douglas Street route will be entertained by square dancers.

A royal salute will be fired by the 5th B.C. Field Battery at 12 noon.

Saturday and Sunday, bands from Washington State high schools and square dancers will entertain at hospitals and parks.

Symphonic orchestras and choirs from Seattle high schools will perform Saturday and Sunday afternoons at 3 p.m. at the Cameron Bandshell in Beacon Hill Park.

The Shorecrest Highlanders band and highland dancers from Seattle will entertain at 4 p.m. Saturday in front of the parliament buildings.

Square dancers take over Saturday evening at St. Paul's Church Hall in Esquimalt and at Royal Oak Hall.

•

Sunday at 10 a.m. you can choose between an open twirling competition at Esquimalt Jubilee Hall and a junior horse show at the Victoria Riding Academy.

The 5th B.C. Field Battery will present a band concert Sunday at 2:30 at Heritage Court in the provincial museum complex.

Monday there's a senior horse show at the academy, a variety show in Beacon Hill Park beginning at 2:30 p.m. and Victoria Motorcycle Club "scrambles" at the old Colwood race track at 2 p.m.

For bowling enthusiasts there's a 10-pin "tournament of champions" at the Mayfair bowling lanes Monday.

The Jaycee Fair will be officially opened Monday at 8 p.m. by the provincial trade and commerce minister, Waldo Skillings.

The fair will feature a nightly Miss Victoria pageant culminating in the crowning of Miss Victoria, 1970 on May 24.

St. Joseph's Denies Move To McKenzie

St. Joseph's Hospital officials denied this morning that they were contemplating building a new acute care hospital on McKenzie Avenue.

"We have already announced our intention, after a great deal of thought and deliberation, to remain where we are if it is at all feasible to do so," said Dr. Alex Wood, chairman of the hospital board.

He was commenting on reports that hospital administrator Dr. E. C. Q. Van Tilburg had indicated that a McKenzie Avenue site was being considered as an alternate site for the new acute care facility.

'GOOD SPOT'

Dr. Van Tilburg told the hospital's women's auxiliary Tuesday the area around Swan Lake on McKenzie would be a good spot for a hospital.

He also told the group that the proposed St. Ann's Academy site presented many drawbacks including lack of solid foundations.

Dr. Wood said he hadn't read the report on Van Tilnurg's statement so was unable to comment on the content.

"But the policy of the board is to remain where we are," he said.

The McKenzie Avenue site was first mentioned as the new home for St. Joseph's about a year ago. It has since been recommended as a new hospital site by Dr. Harvey Agnew, St. Joseph's consultant on hospital matters.

But a few weeks ago the board members rejected their consultant's advice and settled for the St. Ann's Academy site.

On April 28 they received a grant from the Regional Hospital District Board to conduct feasibility studies, $600 of which will go to Agnew as the prime consultant.

To this time no price has been set for the purchase of the St. Ann's site, but the rumored figure is around $2 million.

Short View Of Other Half

Three teen-age girls who ran away to Victoria to "see how the other half lives," as one policeman said, were returned to their Port Angeles homes aboard the ferry MV Coho this morning.

They arrived Tuesday morning and were picked up by Victoria police, apparently after a request for help was received from distraught parents.

The girls, the youngest of whom was 14, spent the night in the juvenile detention home, and this morning one of their parents arrived to escort them home. City police, as a courtesy, drove the party to the Black Ball Ferries terminal on Wharf Street.

Elk Lake Phase-Out For Water

Sooke to Supply Peninsula Needs

By ROGER STONEBANKS

The Greater Victoria Water District plans to run a pipeline up the Saanich Peninsula in 1973 or 1974.

The information was given this morning by water district commissioner Ron Upward following concern expressed at the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health Tuesday about the domestic water supply now drawn from Elk Lake.

The water district's pipeline, when it is built, will bring water from the Sooke watershed area.

Upward said construction of the pipeline will depend on the cost of borrowing money at the time plus financial agreement with Central Saanich and North Saanich.

$3 MILLION

The pipeline would cost about $3 million, although this cost will go up as the years go by. Most of the right-of-way for the line has been acquired.

Senior medical health officer Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread said Tuesday the health board has been keeping "a close eye" on the Elk Lake water supply for a number of years. The water is drawn from the northwest side and is filtered and chlorinated.

He noted that Saanich municipality has a bylaw prohibiting the use of this part of the lake by boats or for recreational purposes but it is difficult to control.

ANOTHER SOURCE

The increasing use of other parts of the lake for recreational use plus the peninsula's dependence on the lake for domestic water means "we are coming to the point where we need another water supply."

He suggested the water board be asked to take "urgent action" to provide a new supply "and the sooner this is done the better. Sometime we may have a situation where we may have to require people to boil their warer."

Health inspector Laurel Benham said if the water board implements the new pipeline "then increasing recreation will not be deleterious. But if this is to be delayed for many years, then outboard-inboard motor boats should be looked at because gas motors have gas and oil trails."

COULD BE PROBLEM

He said this isn't a problem now, but could become one.

Health board member and North Saanich Ald. Trevor Davis was told by Dr. Whitbread there have been no tests to see if there are hydrocarbons after the filters on the present water supply.

"We should see if there is a problem before we try and cure it," he said.

The question arose from the Deep Cove Waterworks District which expressed concern over Saanich proposals to develop Elk Lake as a recreational playground.

It asked that no action be taken that will lead to pollution. It also noted that the present water supply is not "ideal" but is the only one available.

EXPAND RECREATTION

Saanich Ald. Leslie Passmore said expansion of recreational facilities would go ahead if it did not mean contamination of the lake as a water supply.

"No one wants pollution," he said.

The health board agreed to pass on Benham's comments to Ald. William Noel, chairman of Saanich's parks and outdoor recreation committee which is discussing expansion of recreation facilities, and to forward the views expressed generally to the water board and other affected bodies.

Certificates Better For Tested Vehicles

The proprietor of a local auto body shop wants the provincial government to issue certificates rather than stickers to all vehicles which have passed the safety inspection at the motor vehicle testing station.

Under present policy, all vehicles which successfully pass through the testing station have a confirmatory sticker fastened to the lower right hand corner of their windshields.

Peter Albers, co-owner of Belmont Collision, feels that the stickers present some difficulty to a number of drivers. He replaces a minimum of twenty windshields a month in his shop and says tshat "it is absolultely impossible to transfer the sticker from the old to the new glass."

REPEAT VISIT

And unless the owner has retained his check card from the station, he must find both a dollar and a half plus the necessary time for a repeat inspection. This is the only way to obtain duplicate sticker without the original punch card.

Albers suggests that certificates rather than stickers would be more satisfactory. The cards would be carried with the vehicle registration and insurance card.

He intends to submit his proposal in a letter to the attorney-general.

A new car and parts dealer said that his firm replaces "possibly eight to ten windshileds" a month although the figures vary considerably. Another dealer thought his firm might "average four" replacements monthly. He did add that it is the policy of his firm to leave the corner of the old windshield with the sticker in the car. This section can be presented to the inspection station for a new sticker valid until January.

NEW COMMANDER of Canadian Forces Base Comox, Colonel Grant H. Nichols will take charge from Colonel K. C. Lett in July. The former Commander will be posted to the National Defence College, Kingston, Ont. Colonel Nichols, a native of Sarnia, Ont., is a former fighter pilot and was awarded the United States Air Medal for his actions as a flight commander with the 5th United States Air Force in Korea. He has been at Mobile Command headquarters, Canadian Forces Base St. Hubert, since May, 1967, when he was promoted to his present rank.

Dream Photographer Gives Penny a Hint

By PENNY SAVER

The long hall stretched before me, dull and grey with walls that curved and curled as I ran, and ran, and ran. I was late, terribly late, hours and hours late. But the hall would never end. End it did, so suddenly that I had to grab for the door jamb to keep from catapulting into the living room. Gasping for breath I tiptoed into the silent, empty room, looking for—what? The hall had been too long; I couldn't remember. "Say Cheese!" I wheeled around to face the photographer. His finger slowly pressed the cable release. The smile froze on my face. The shutter—rang. And kept on ringing. I rolled over and tried to find the alarm clock. My eyelashes weighed a ton and my eyelids protested at the strain of lifting them. There was something I had planned to do, something about a photographer?

It was very nice of the photographer in my dream to remind me that I was going to visit the new cheese shop I had found. I had dropped in before on a day when my money was exhausted and the cheque book strained to the limit. The place had been irresistible with its long refrigerator case of things to go with cheese—different kinds of crackers, beverages, odds and ends such as a selection of mustards from dfiferent lands. (All these mustards were different colors and should, therefore, have different tastes.) For a moment I wished I was a mustard lover so I could savor the differences. But I hate the stuff so I leave this honor to someone who can appreciate the taste. I peered at the shelves before leaving and saw much to interest me, but the item that brought me back and seeped into my dream was cheese.

Cheese and Walnuts

This shop carries cheese logs and cheese balls. Cheese logs are made from cheddar cheese that has been treated in such a way that it be comes spreadable at room temperature. It is then moulded into a log shape and rolled in chopped walnuts. Some logs come without the walnuts. The cheese balls are made from a mixture of cheddar, blue and other European cheeses made spreadable then rolled in chopped walnuts. Both logs and balls are close to a pound in weight and cost $1.98. These would be interesting for party occasions, and if there is some left over, don't worry. These cheeses can be frozen, thawed, then frozen again and the shopkeeper assured me it wouldn't harm them a bit.

I was surprised to pick up a bottle marked "cooking sherry" and note from the label that it contained 12 per cent alcohol. "This is British Columbia," I said to the store keeper. "How on earth can you carry this here?" "I don't know," he shrugged. "But it seems I can. I understand they put salt in or something so it is undrinkable but still gives cooking the winey flavor. The salt, I guess, would just blend in with the other seasonings." A smallish bottle (perhaps a pint in size) costs 70 cents. There are both red wines and white in this line.

If you would like to know where this shop is located please call 382-3131 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m.

KNIT AND CHAT

Tension Must Be Checked

By MAY MAC LEAN

This week's mail brought another letter from a woman who would like to substitute a polypropylene in place of the yarn called for on the instruction sheet.

You really have to check the tension carefully before deciding, though I do feel in this particular case the polypropylene could be successfully substituted.

Knitters do not realize the importance of checking the tension before starting the garment. The difference sometimes of half a stitch per inch will make the world of difference on the measurement of the finished garment. Take for instance a back of a sweater with 100 stitches. Knitting at five stitches to the inch in width, the finished back should be 20 inches wide.

If you are knitting at 4½ stitches to the inch, your back will measure 22 inches wide, a difference of two inches, and one whole size larger.

The same would be true, if you knit too tightly. For example 5½ stitches to the inch in width would give you a back measuring only 18 inches across, two inches smaller. Again, one whole size difference.

Unless you are working with a definite pattern stitch that is important in the overall design, the number of rows to the inch need not be absolutely correct. Usually the length is given in inches. I am not saying you need not get the tension of the rows perfect. By all means do so if it is at all possible. But if you do substitute another yarn, it may not always be possible.

Remember too, that if you do substitute a different yarn, your finished garment may not look exactly like the photograph, which was no doubt, what attracted you to the design in the first place. By knitting the swatch, you can see how the yarn will work up, and whether this is what you want for your garment. Check the tension at the same time.

The ever popular ribbing forms the sleeves, yoke and double neckband of the pullover pictured above. Three panels of ribs and puffs in triangular formation are separated by cables. Knitted with an Aran yarn that is completely machine washable and machine dryable, the pullover instructions come in sizes 34-36-38.

To order Leaflet No. 6902, send 35c in coin or money order (no stamps or personal cheques please). Your order must be accompanied with a stamped fully addressed envelope, long one if possible. Send to:— May E. Mac Lean, "Knit and Chat", c-o Victoria Daily Times. Please be sure to state pattern number when ordering.

Whole Economy Would Crumble Without a Female Work-Force

OTTAWA (CP) — Sylva Gelber, director of the labor department's women's bureau, said Monday night that the Canadian economy "would fall flat on its face" but for its women workers.

Taking part in a panel discussion, Miss Gelber criticized industry for not hiring female university graduates, for not promoting women to managerial ranks, and for permitting discrimination within company pension plans.

She noted that one-third of Canadian workers are women and that more than half of these were married.

"The time has come for us to forget whether it is right or wrong, moral or immoral, for them to be there. We live in a free society and their reasons are ones of personal choice."

Miss Gelber suggested that interviewers on Canadian university campuses didn't want to interview female graduates.

K. O. Bagnall, assistant vice-president of Bell Canada, said most university graduates are hired for their potential, not whether they could perform a job at the moment.

"If you hire 10 male grads and 10 female grads, in 10 to 15 years' time you will find more of the males still with you, ready to rise in the corporate structure," he said.

Young men are generally more ready to move from city to city if required. Young women interrupted their careers to marry and raise families.

Miss Gelber replied this response was typical of the "trite stereotype" quoted by management.

Her office was planning a study of such matters.

Guide Groups Plan Tea, Fashion Show

A fashion show, tea and bake sale is being sponsored by the mothers and girls of the First Beaver Lake Brownies and Girl Guides, Saanich Division, Thursday at 3:15 p.m. in St. Michael's Church Hall, West Saanich Road.

Part of the proceeds are to be used to help meet expenses for Bonnie Cronk, the girl guide chosen from this Saanich group to attend Camp Kiawa, near Hamilton, Ontario. She will be leaving at the end of June with 15 other Guides and Rangers from B.C. to join girls from all parts of Canada.

Our Freedom Is Fragile Nun Tells CWL Meeting

"Freedom is fragile; handle with prayer," was the message sister Moninna McKenna gave 200 delegates and observers at an Island Catholic Women's League convention in Ladysmith last week.

Sister McKenna, provincial director of studies for the Sisters of St. Ann, said basic rights, like freedom, can only be learned and are useless unless people know what they are.

"Education has many important objectives but the prime objective of school systems is a recognition of the rights of human beings."

Freedom, she said, is man's greatest prerogative and also his "gravest responsibility."

There is an "ever-present threat to human freedom."

The threat can be kept in abeyance by enlightened mothers who will teach their children freedom without neglecting discipline.

Representatives of other women's organizations attended the meetings.

They included Mrs. F. A. Goodwin, president of the Anglican Church Women, and Mrs. Ian Potts, of Comox-Nanaimo Presbyterial. Robert Strachan, ex-NDP leader also attended.

Miss Ria Hyl, a lay apostle from the Netherlands, addressed the group on her work among the natives of the Dutch West Indies, where she is working with the Sisters of Charity.

Bishop Remi de Roo celebrated mass with six Island priests.

Last year's officers were all returned to office.

Tea Saturday

Mrs. George Pearkes will open the blue and gold tea to be held Saturday from 2 to 4:30 p.m. at the Britannia auditorium, 1616 Blanshard Street. Proceeds from the tea, which is sponsored by the Ex-Service Women's Branch No. 182, Royal Canadian Legion, will go to the cancer fund and the Branch Benevolence.

Culotte Uniforms Steal the Show

By ROBIN BURGESS

Those mini-uniforms were a problem, all right.

No matter how charming young nurses bending over to make beds looked from the male patients' point of view, hospital administrators just didn't feel the leggy show proper.

But now, with the help of dress shop manager Roma Mattinson, administrators and nurses have found a compromise that has both sides smiling—a culotte uniform with a skirt front. It's proper enough to gladden the most old-fashioned superintendent's heart and modern enough to please the hippest young nurse.

"These dresses are a boon to young nurses in mini-uniforms," said Mrs. Mattinson. She had already received as many orders as she can fill from enthusiastic nurses at several of Victoria's private hospitals.

"They're very, very nice," said Mrs. Marguerite Wilkinson, superintendent of Glenwarren Private Hospital. "The patients and many of the visitors seem to like them." Mrs. Wilkinson, owner of the first and, at this time, the only culotte uniform available, was the first hospital administrator to consult Mrs. Mattinson about some solution to the problem of mini-skirted nurses.

The dresses are made of light-weight, Arnel shark-skin and are treated with Scotchgard so spots can be wiped off with a damp cloth. The front appears to be a simple skirt and the culottes are concealed in a wide pleat at the back. For greater ease of movement there is an "action pleat" in the back bodice.

The price is one of the happiest parts. The new uniforms will be only a few dollars more than the older, less stylish uniforms.

Believe it or not, this is a culotte. Mrs. Marguerite Wilkinson, superintendent of Glenwarren Private Hospital, models the culotte uniform that she and a local dress shop manager came up with to solve the problem of mini-skirted nurses. The skirt front looks as proper as can be while a deep pleat at the back conceals the culottes. The only ones who might object to the new uniforms are the patients who formerly enjoyed the sight of leggy young nurses bending over to make the beds.

After-Dark Diversions in Tokyo Include Bars Just for Women

TOKYO (WP) — Tokyo may still deserve its reputation as a man's town, but after-dark diversion in night clubs and bars with male "hosts" for a female clientele is rapidly acquiring the status of a minor miracle in the local entertainment industry.

"Host clubs" for women only were dismissed as a titillating—and probably short-lived—curiosity when "Club Tokyo" and "Night Tokyo" opened last August amid a glare of overseas attention and a stony silence in the Japanese Press.

Now the number has risen to seven with the gala inaugural of the biggest and gaudiest of them all, "Night Miyamasu," offering 139 carefully-screened partners to suit the varied tastes of a clientele ranging from the office girl to the roving housewife.

Formerly a "Hostess" bar, "Night Miyamasu," located in a famous gay quarter of the same name in the uptown shibuya district, switched over to boys after manager M. H. Kono surveyed the success stories of existing clubs set up during the past nine months for the distaff trade.

Kono said that his "market analysis' showed a greater profit potential in shibuya for a "host club" free from local competition than from the continuation of his old establishment in a city already boasting an estimated 30,000 bars catering to men.

Most of them are intimate two-by-fours where a small group of regular habitues linger away their evenings with the same friendly "hostesses." Japanese bars are a marvel to western sociologists who perennially try to probe why the wives tolerate the system and whether it is really here to stay.

The opening of "Club Tokyo" and "Night Tokyo" last year marked the first attempts by male entrepreneurs to exploit the potentialities of latent feminine revolt. These have since been followed by five other ventures and a scattering of small "host" bars.

COMPANIONSHIP

For $2.20 per hour, plus the cost of drinks, a customer gets companionship on the dance floor and in the lounge. The clubs all announce strict rules governing behavior on the premises but make no attempt to curtail liaisons after closing time.

"Club Tokyo" reports a clientele of 200 nightly, typically including a high proportion of working wives between the ages of 30 and 40. But patronage has increased relatively little, partly reflecting a poor location far from subway lines.

The most striking success story is "Night Tokyo," located next door to Tokyo station, a mecca for 10 commuter railway lines. Discovered by office girls on their way home, the club has doubled the number of its "hosts" to 130 since its opening and says it has to turn away customers at least twice weekly when it reaches a full house of 300.

More than 620 men reportedly applied when "Night Miyamasu" advertised last month for "hosts" between 18 and 35 in newspaper and magazine ads, offering a monthly salary of $556 for a six-hour daily stint beginning at 5:30 p.m.

MARRIED HOSTS

The applicants were screened by 20 female judges commissioned by the management, consisting of housewives, fashion models and office girls. Ten per cent of those applying were married. Many held daytime white collar jobs.

"There are many night spots where men can forget about their mundane responsibilities and duties, but few for women," said manager Kono. "This isn't fair."

The opening of the new club was reported with self-conscious solemnity in the Asahi Evening News, an English-language paper addressed to foreigners, but was ignored in the companion Japanese-language Asahi Shimbun.

The Japan Times recently reported that Club Tokyo has an American student enrolled at Sophia University in Tokyo as one of its hosts and that applications for jobs were coming in from Canada and other foreign countries. But a Times distaff columnist pondered the "unexplained" lack of a foreign clientele in the club. "Is it that American women are too bashful? Too pleased with what they have? or too haughty for Japanese men?" she asked.

DEAR ABBY . . .

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: When Tom and I got married two years ago, he made me tear up all the pictures I had taken with my ex-boyfriends. He also tore up all the pictures of himself and his ex-girlfriends—or so I thought.

We went to visit his mother the other day and as we got ready to leave, Tom drew my attention to a framed picture on the wall. He laughed and said, "Well, look at that!" I didn't see anything funny about it. It was a picture of him and the girl he went with while he was stationed in the army in Germany. He had his arm around her.

I was so shocked and hurt, but I didn't say a word. I've been to the house several times before, and that picture wasn't hanging there. Why all of a sudden now?

My mother-in-law is not a stupid woman, and she surely must have known that this would hurt me. I really can't imagine why she did this. I love her dearly and I always thought she loved me, too.

I haven't said a word, but I've been crying my eyes out. Should I tell my husband how I feel? Or should I tell my mother-in-law?—Hurt.

DEAR HURT: Since your husband drew your attention to it, thinking it was "funny," skip him. But do tell your mother-in-law.

DEAR ABBY: I agree with you that each man must decide for himself how much church is "enough." I personally feel that a woman is lucky if her biggest complaint is a husband who wears his knees out in church.

Here's a little verse I've known for years, which says it very well:

"Whenever we pass by a church
Let's stop and pay
a visit.
Then when at last we're carried i
Our Lord won't say,
'Who is it?'"
—A Friend in K.C.

DEAR ABBY: Are gentlemen becoming an extinct breed in our civilization? I ride the bus to work every day and back, and I have seen men sitting with their noses buried in the newspapers while women stand. I mean some pregnant and elderly women. Once in a while a gentleman will stand and offer a lady his seat, but then you should see the dirty looks he gets from the men who are sitting. I'd like your opinion. —Middle-Aged Lady.

DEAR LADY: No pregnant or elderly woman should stand while men sit. Neither should feeble or handicapped men stand while healthy, able-bodied women sit.

Being female no longer entitles a women to special treatment in a world where women compete with men for the same job.

TODAY'S RECIPE

PARTY PEANUT FUDGE
(Makes 3 Dozen Pieces)

Five and a quarter cups lightly-packed brown sugar; 1 cup milk; ¼ teaspoon salt, ½ cup peanut butter; 2 teaspoons vanilla; 1-3 cup chopped salted peanuts.

Butter an 8-inch square pan. Combine sugar, milk and salt in a saucepan. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly. Bring to boil; continue boiling without stirring until mixture reaches 240 deg. F. on a candy thermometer, or forms a soft ball when dropped in cold water. Remove from heat, add peanut butter and vanilla. Beat until mixture begins to thicken (1½ minutes). Stir in nuts; pour into prepared pan. Cool.

HELPLESS CHILD ABANDONED AT SCHOOL FOR RETARDED

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP)—A five-year-old girl has been abandoned at Woodlands School for the Retarded after her parents tried without success to have her admitted to the school.

The girl, Theresa Louise, is a quadraplegic, must be strapped to her bed, chokes involuntarily and must be watched 24 hours a day.

For more than a year, her parents tried to have her admitted to the school, but authorities said there were 60 youngsters on the waiting list.

They finally took their daughter to Woodlands for outpatient medical assessment. Under the pretext of going out for cigarettes, they slipped away, and have since left for a few days' holiday — their first in five years.

A spokesman for the school said Tuesday the child will be kept there, despite the overcrowding.

Dr. F. G. Tucker, deputy minister of mental health services, said Tuesday night that as far as is known, this is the first case of child abandonment at an institution under his direction.

He said new facilities at Courtenay, Maillardville and Victoria should provide about 420 beds, but it would be two years before all were available.

"We do have a lot of problems, but when these new centres are opened, we should be on the way towards solving them," he said.

$5 Billion Power Pact Signed by Hydro-Quebec

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec Finance Minister Paul Dozois Tuesday night described Hydro-Quebec's $5,000,000,000 contract to buy electric power from the giant Churchill Falls project in central Labrador as "the biggest power contract ever signed in the world."

The contract between the publicly-owned utility and Churchill Falls (Labrador) Corp. Ltd. was signed in Montreal Monday following years of negotiations involving Newfoundland Premier Joseph Smallwood and three successive Quebec leaders.

The contract, tabled in the national assembly Tuesday and to be examined by the assembly's committee on natural resources next Tuesday, provides for purchase of nearly all the electricity generated by the plant.

Depending on final construction costs, rates will vary between two and three mills a kilowatt hour for a period of 40 years until the year 2016.

Some power is expected to be available in 1972 and all generators are to be in full operation in 1976.

RENEW IN 2016

The contract with the Labrador subsidiary of British Newfoundland Corp. (Brinco)is to be automatically renewed in 2016 for a further period of 25 years at a fixed rate of exactly two mills a kilowatt hour.

Mr. Dozois described the contract as "frighteningly complicated." It had "enormous advantages"—which he didn't explain—over the basis for negotiations approved by the cabinet in 1966.

WILL SELL SOME

During negotiations, which began in the early 1960s under former Liberal premier Jean Lesage and continued under the late premier Daniel Johnson, Quebec insisted that it be the sole purchaser of power and that it be allowed to sell any residue it did not need to Ontario and New Brunswick.

Except for a small portion allotted to Newfoundland and the area near Churchill Falls, Quebec will obtain all of the expected 34,300,000,000 kilowatt hours annual production. Some will be sold to Ontario and New Brunswick.

Old Pros Returned In India

By INDER MALHOTRA
The Manchester Guardian

CALCUTTA — S. K. Patil and Krishna Menon, two powerful Indian leaders on opposite sides of the political fence who had been humbled in the last general election, Tuesday made a spectacular comeback.

Both were elected to the Indian parliament, from constituencies nearly 1,300 miles apart, with massive majorities.

Patil, a former minister and a power withing the ruling Congress Party, was elected on a Congress ticket. Menon, a former defence minister who lost his job because of India's military reverse at the hands of Communist China seven years ago, won as an independent with support from West Bengal's communist-dominated United Front. Both victories were expected.

Saanich Cuts Trees For Road Widening

Some of the memorial trees on Shelbourne Street in Saanich will be coming down.

Public works committee recommended Tuesday night that the trees on five blocks between Garnett and Glencraig be removed.

The reason: Widening of McKenzie Avenue and a planned shopping centre bounded by Shellbourne, McKenzie and Cedar Hill Road.

McKenzie will be widened to five lanes, including left turn lanes at Shelbourne, and the shopping centre will also need left turn lanes.

Assistant engineer John Cowlin said other trees would be planted behind the curb to retain the present atmosphere. He added that no more trees than necessary would be removed "and no sooner than necessary."

The shopping centre developers will be planting trees along their property line.

The plane trees were planted on Shelbourne as a memorial to those who were killed in the First World War.

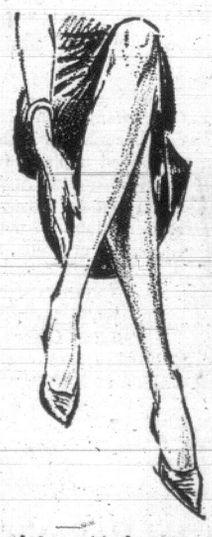
NEW LEG CREAM
Ends Embarrassment of
PURPLISH VEIN DISCOLORATIONS
Incredibly Lifelike! Makes Legs Look Years Younger . . . Instantly

Now there's an amazing new leg make-up discovery that ends self-conscious embarrassment of purplish-blue varicose veins and leg blemishes. Bare legged in a bathing suit or shorts . . . or with nylons when you're all dressed up . . . discolored legs look old and unattractive. But now, thanks to new TERRI COVER CREAM you no longer need suffer this unnecessary embarrassment. New and different from cover-ups that obviously coat the surface, rich creamy TERRI soaks into leg skin carrying an incredibly life-like tint that completely blots out even the darkest purple and blue splotches.



The New Skin-Tone-Tinted Leg Make-Up

So amazingly perfect does TERRI blend in with your natural skin toning pigment, even on close examination no one knows for sure where the natural skin coloring ends and TERRI starts! The purplish blue shadows of enlarged or varicose veins are no longer visible. Legs look young again . . . smooth, trim, firm, flawless. Yet TERRI is safe and harmless as any fine cosmetic . . . won't run even when swimming . . . won't stain nylons. Stays on natural looking until removed with soap and warm water or cleansing cream. So don't let leg discolorations make you self conscious. Get your shade of TERRI today . . . and enjoy the summer!

SALUTE TO QUEEN

Ceremony A Part Of Victoria

By ELIZABETH FORBES

On Friday morning in front of the Legislative Buildings, the annual IODE ceremony "Salute to Queen Victoria" will take place. As usual it will be highlighted with children from the elementary schools. They will fill the wide stone steps in front of the main entrance. In their gay-colored clothes and with their happy, shining faces, they will create a picture not easy to forget.

Forbes

During the program these boys and girls will sing the songs of Canada in clear, ringing voices. At the end they will no doubt, lead the crowd in "God Save The Queen."

This is a ceremony that has been a part of our Victoria Day celebrations for 43 years.

First time (as far as records show) was back in 1926, the year Queen Victoria's statue on the legislative grounds was completed.

★ ★ ★

The IODE had a junior members group then named Coronation Children's Chapter. And it was the late Mrs. R. S. Day, prominent in work of the Order, who dreamed up the "Salute" with these juniors as leading ladies.

Right from the start the Victoria School Board cooperated with the IODE to bring representative groups from the various elementary schools. Scouts and guides have also added their quotas of young people.

You'll be on the wrong track if you think this ceremoney is presented mainly to remind us of Queen Victoria and her birthday.

You'll also be quite wrong if you believe that because IODE, spelled out in full, says Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire, that it is merely an attempt to burnish up the royal crown.

And you'd be dead wrong to scoff at the ceremony because you think it has outlived its usefulness, or if that the children would be better in their classrooms instead of singing on the steps of the Legislative Buildings.

★ ★ ★

This Victoria Day program is sponsored by the IODE in the firm belief that the history of Canada — and, in this instance, our own history — is worth remembering.

"Our city was born during the early days of Queen Victoria's reign," says Mrs. V. H. V. Sheppard, IODE's municipal regent here. "It was named for that Queen.

"The IODE is proud to bring these facts into focus once a year and to make them live again through the voices of our children."

★ ★ ★

Any misconceived idea that the words "imperial" and "empire" in the IODE name means it is geared solely to promote British tradition, is shrugged off by Mrs. Sheppard as "old hat."

"We are Canadian through and through," she says. "We work for Canada and for the Canadian people."

This fact is exemplified not only in Mrs. Sheppard's words but in deeds.

Over the years since the order was formed, the IODE has given millions of dollars to help Canadian youth complete their educations and to go on to higher learning.

Through bursaries, scholarships and grants, at primary, provincial and national levels, chapters across Canada have helped hundreds of young men and women, many of whom are now in high positions in business and professions in every province.

★ ★ ★

Quite recently chapters in this city, through their municipal organization, presented a cheque for $1,000 to the George R. Pearkes Clinic for Handicapped Children.

This was given, Mrs. Sheppard says, not only to assist in this "very important" work but also as a tribute to the service rendered our province by both Mr. and Mrs. Pearkes during his 10 years regime as lieutenant-governor.

Getting back to Friday morning for a moment, and the "Salute to Queen Victoria."

How about attending the ceremony.

Listen to the voice of Canada in the singing of the children on the Legislative Building steps.

Join in that singing. And, for a short time, at least, take pride in your Canadian heritage and the heritage of your city.

SWOOSH AND IT'S OUT as cloud of dry chemical from portable extinguisher douses demonstration fire. At the request of Saanich Fire Chief Joe Sutherland, pupils at Royal Oak Junior Secondary School were given this lesson in fire fighting by Bill Adams, representative of the Vancouver firm handling the equipment. Extinguisher handled by David Cumberland, discharges particles of mono-ammonium phosphate which interfere with the molecular chain reaction in burning process to smother fire. It takes 8 million particles to deal with each square foot of fire. Adams also lectured pupils on eye safety. (Saanich Police photo.)

Equal Time Asked By Angry McGeer

VANCOUVER (CP)—Provincial Liberal leader Pat McGeer Tuesday night fired off a telegram to CBC President George Davidson demanding 30 minutes of prime television time.

The telegram followed Dr. McGeer's viewing of a provincially - controversial film, The Good Life, which made its debut earlier this month at a Kelowna Social Credit meeting where it was unveiled by Premier Bennett.

The 27-minute color film was included Tuesday night in the CBC program Hourglass, a 60-minute production of sports and weather and public affairs. Excerpts from the film were also shown on the evening news.

Dr. McGeer's telegram to Mr. Davidson said:

"Watched Social Credit free-time political telecast on Hourglass entitled The Good Life. Demand equal free political time for both opposition parties."

Dr. McGeer charged the film was financed by "political pilfering from the public treasury."

He also demanded that Waldo Skillings, provincial minister of industrial development, the department for which the film was made, produce vouchers for the cost of the production and that the Social Credit party be billed accordingly.

Powell Enters Race

NEW YORK (AP)—Representative Adam Clayton Powell, veteran congressman from the Harlem district, has entered the race for the Democratic nomination for mayor, making a field of seven. His rivals in the primary June 17 include former mayor Robert F. Wagner and author Norman Mailer.

Love-In Approved but on Probation

The Victoria Youth Council will be on probation Saturday, June 28, when it holds a love-in at Beacon Hill Park from 2 to 5 p.m.

Victoria's parks committee voted Tuesday to allow the group to hold the event but refused the group's request for another live-in on Aug. 16.

Ald. Clyde Savage said, "It all depends on how things go at the first one. They have promised to keep the noise down."

The committee stipulated that no amplified music should be used.

Ald. Stewart queried the "imbalance" of restricting the youth group's event.

"We have to be reasonable. Nobody will deny that the Shriners disrupted downtown Victoria last Friday . . . but no one objected. Frankly, I thought it was the best thing that's happened in Victoria for a long time."

SQUARE TOO SMALL

The Victoria Youth Council's request to hold two happenings in Bastion Square were refused on the grounds that the square is too small to accommodate such mass gatherings.

The council also asked permission to hold a week of plays and other presentations in Centennial Square. This was tabled until more explicit details were available.

A petition from 68 ratepayers for the removal of bushes in Pemberton Park was approved.

Said Ald. Savage, "I think they are worrying about what's going on in the bushes . . . they're very thick and should be thinned out."

Passengers aboard seven cruise ships due to dock at various intervals at Ogden Point during the summer will be greeted with flowers, courtesy of the city.

The committee approved expenditure of $900 to provide two standards, four hanging flower baskets, and six curb planters, to be placed at the dock on each ship's arrival.

They were told the Victoria Visitors' Bureau would be greeting each women passenger with a nosegay.

ANOTHER OPPORTUNITY TO INVEST IN SAANICH DEBENTURES

Re: Second Public Offering of District of Saanich Municipal Debentures

Over the past four years the District has committed large sums of money on capital programmes. An average of approximately $600,000.00 annually has been spent out of current revenue but money by-laws have authorized Council to spend over $4,000,000.00 on Municipal projects. Much of the money has been spent, is being spent, or will be spent in the near future.

Last July your District successfully marketed $1,900,000.00, or approximately one-half the total amount. We are now in the position of offering the other half in order to complete payment for projects already undertaken and to proceed with the others.

Owing to the high interest rates prevailing, the Saanich Council is most anxious that citizens be offered these bonds at the same price as offered to large institutions and thus receive personal benefit. Last year debentures totalling $352,000.00 were sold through the Municipal Hall to local citizens. This result speaks well for the confidence our local citizens have in their own area and as a "first" in Saanich has been recognized by the financial institutions.

The bonds may be purchased in denominations of $500.00 or $1,000.00 up to the amount as shown on the schedule. In order to facilitate the marketing of these debentures, we ask those who are interested to complete the attached order form and bring it to the Municipal Hall or mail it. Payment will be required on or before the 2nd of July or accrued interest will have to be charged.

If further information is required, it is available from the Comptroller-Treasurer's Office at the Saanich Municipal Hall, 770 Vernon Avenue, Victoria, B.C. (Phone 386-2241).

Saanich Municipality is in excellent financial position. Council is pleased to offer this opportunity to invest in district debentures in a manner similar to that which has been so successful in other Canadian Municipalities.

Mayor,

$10 Billion Bureaucracy Controlled by Committees

By KEN CLARK

OTTAWA (CP) — As co-ordinator of House of Commons committee activities, MP Grant Deachman is helping to pioneer development of a changed Canadian political structure. He says he likes the role because it is an evolving field.

"We are attempting to do something that Parliament hasn't done before," the 55-year-old Liberal MP for Vancouver Quadra said in an interview.

The job is to make the Commons committee system an effective force in keeping within new parliamentary rules put into effect Jan. 14.

The new rules shifted much of the Commons work load from the final-decision chamber to rooms off parliamentary corridors where the 18 committees of MPs meet.

As a result, more parliamentary activity now takes place in committees, where MPs who rarely have a chance to speak in the Big House can get their say in the little rooms.

In Mr. Deachman's view, the new committee structure arises from the fact that the government has developed into a sophisticated bureaucracy spending $10,000,000,000 a year.

ROLE OF MP ENLARGED

"So you have to have a sophisticated system to look at it," he says. That's what the new-look committees do, examining all departmental spending estimates, scrutinizing legislation and doing anything else that is referred to them.

The new-style committee system which gives more scope to MPs fits right into the new breed of the 1960s in Parliament.

A generation or more ago, the MP was a relatively passive fellow, Mr. Deachman says. Not now. The MP demands much more of Parliament and will confront his leaders in private party caucus sessions, seeking and getting explanations for their actions.

Mr. Deachman fell into the role of scheduling and co-ordinating committee work in 1965 when Lester B. Pearson, then prime minister, asked him to take it over. Committee work was being expanded then and this year's change was another big step in the process.

TIMES CONFLICT

Still at his expanded role, Mr. Deachman cheerfully bears the brunt of the stream of complaints from MPs torn by conflicting demands on their time.

The complaints vary. There's the chap who serves on two committees and finds both are scheduled to sit at the same time. Or others who resist scheduling of sessions on Mondays or Fridays because it reduces the length of weekends in the home riding.

"We try to satisfy them all," Mr. Deachman says carefully, then adds: "But we don't, by any means."

Bulk of the committee sessions are on Tuesdays and Thursdays, which have come to be known as "committee days." They often conflict with the regular afternoon and evening sittings of the Commons, making the life of an MP even more harried.

The MP, often criticized for not spending enough time in the Commons chamber, finds it even more difficult to be there under the expanded committee system.

Mr. Deachman says that in meeting their consitituency and parliamentary obligations MPs labor under a heavy load.

PONDER SOLUTIONS

"You can only push committees so far and then the members start to grumble," he says. An MP serving on two committees could attend 100 meetings in a single session of eight or nine months.

To ease the load, one of the five-a-week daily Commons sittings has been cancelled occasionally to permit committees to catch up on their work without Commons competition.

In the evolution of the expanded committee system, other ideas are being kicked around to keep MPs happy. Mr. Deachman says one is a proposal to cancel Commons sittings for a week at a time to allow committees to meet in peace.

Mr. Deachman would prefer to see fewer committees in operation so MPs don't lose heart and exhaust themselves.

He also advocates the arming of committees with hired experts to help them do a better job of boring into government spending and other activities. Publicly-owned corporations "dazzle us with their experts" when their officials appear before the critical eyes of committees who have none of their own.

SEEKS RESEARCHERS

Mr. Deachman would also like to see a full-time research and development staff attached to the committee bureaucracy that is growing up to permit the committees to do a better job.

All told, about 130 translators, clerical workers, committee clerks and others keep the committees going and record verbatim — in English and French — the words spoken therein. Mr. Deachman expects the staff to double within a few years.

Aerial Easement Sought

Bastion Square is due for another face-lifting.

Application was received by Victoria's public works committee Tuesday for an aerial easement over the city-owned alleyway between the Board of Trade building and the building containing the Coach and Four Restaurant.

Architects Peterson and Lester produced plans for an outside access stairway to the second floor of the Coach and Four building.

The committee referred the plan to city department officials for study and suggestions.

Patrolmen in Beacon Hill Park will receive an extra 10 cents an hour under a new contract with the city.

Currently, members of the Metropolitan Security Services Ltd. receive an hourly rate of $2.25 an hour.

The city's parks committee voted that a new contract be drawn up and the requested increase approved.

Curfew Planned

LANGLEY (CP) — RCMP in this Fraser Valley municipality will enforce a 9:30 p.m. curfew for children under 16 to cope with up to 30,000 young persons expected for a rock music festival this weekend.

Drug Firms Use Doctors In Lobby

By MORTON MINTZ

WASHINGTON (WP) — To judge by the official record, physicians at the startling rate of 350-to-1 oppose the effort of the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) to take about 90 popular combinations of antibiotics off the market.

Even though the FDA is backed by the nation's most prestigious scientific body, the National Academy of Sciences (NAS)-National Research Council (NRC), only nine doctors have written to Washington to back up the agency, compared with almost 3,500 who are opposed.

But an agency analysis of the 3,500 letters shows that almost all of them were responses prompted by the Upjohn Co. and E. R. Squibb & Sons "to barrage us with testimonials in support of their products," principally Panalba (Upjohn) and Mysteclin-F (Squibb).

Many of the letters carried verbatim or paraphrased "from paragraphs" that Squibb, in a letter to doctors, had listed among "guidelines which physicians may want to include in letters to FDA."

LETTERS DUPLICATED

"In some cases indentical letters were received from several physicians in the same clinic or hospital," the agency analysis said. "A number of such letters received from Oak Forest Hospital, Oak Forest, Ill., were identical to a number received from Chicago State Hospital. . .

"The Maine Medical Association apparently circularized to its membership a paraphrased list of the Squibb guidelines," the analysis said. "There is evidence that a Squibb detail man actually prepared a letter for the physician's signature. In some cases, the physician's letter was mailed to us in a Squibb envelope. . ."

ADVERSE REACTIONS

The NAS-NRC and the FDA invited—but did not receive—controlled studies showing that the products are more effective than their ingredients used separately. The agencies concluded that use of the products is irrational and can cause needless adverse reactions, some of which are serious and even lethal.

One of the physicians supporting FDA wrote a note to the agency in his own hand on a letter from Squibb that thanked him for writing the FDA in support of Mysteclin-F. "I never wrote such a letter," said the note to FDA from Dr. William V. Lyden of San Francisco. "If I had," he continued, "it would be to support your action. . . ."

Another physician scrawled his protest on a "dear doctor" letter from the Maine Medical Association which solicited support for the Squibb combination.

'Open Files' For Welfare, NDP Pledge

VANCOUVER (CP) — Opposition Leader Tom Berger said Tuesday he will establish an "open file" policy for all welfare and compensation recipients, if he is elected premier.

The NDP leader told students at Point Grey high school here the tendency toward secrecy in government has done more to alienate people from the government than any other single factor.

Mr. Berger said a welfare recipient should have the right to "lean across the desk" and take a look at the file his welfare worker uses.

"Right now, you don't get a look at that file," he said. "Only the government does."

Mr. Berger said files may contain reports alleging an applicant is ineligible for welfare or compensation, but that applicant would never find out under the present policy, nor would he be likely to get a straight answer from the government.

SFU Senate Approves Proposals

VANCOUVER (CP) — The senate of Simon Fraser University approved all but five of 23 recommendations on policy of admissions, credits and standings of students during a special session last week.

Uncertainty over admissions and course credits has created serious controversy on the SFU campus and has led to several stormy sessions of senate, including one which led to a student sit-in last November.

Friday's meeting, attended by 14 of the senate's 37 members, approved most of the proposals in a report by Dr. John Ellis, head of SFU's professional development foundation, who was assigned earlier to set up a policy.

The remaining recommendations will be reviewed by a six-man committee set up by Dr. Kenneth Strand, acting president, of SFU and chairman of senate. They will be presented at another meeting to be called by the end of May.

KISS OF DEATH GIVEN FORESTS BY MISTLETOE

Mistletoe — the word calls up images of stolen kisses at Christmas time, or of the religion of the ancient Druids.

But to forestry experts, mistletoe is a killer on the most-wanted list — a killer of trees.

Five varieties of dwarf mistletoe flourish in Canada, and four of them can be found in British Columbia, according to Tegid Jones, of the Federal Forest Research Laboratory off Burnside Road.

This year, the dwarf mistletoe in coniferous trees will get special attention from the lab's field program of forest insect and disease surveys, Jones said.

LITTLE KNOWN

"We don't know nearly enough about mistletoe's effect on coniferous trees. Our rangers will be trying to determine the extent of it in B.C., and the coastal area especially," he said.

Mistletoe, which saps a tree's strength, causes deformities, and eventually kills the tree, is but one of the enemies of the insect and disease survey this year.

Twenty-five rangers and appraisal officers felt a few days ago for their long summer in the woods examining insect and disease conditions, he said.

The rangers, most of them full-time employees of the forest lab, have been going out every summer for more than 30 years, trying to widen knowledge of forest-destroyers.

"We need to grow better trees — plant them faster, grow them faster, have them grow big and healthy," Jones said.

This, he said, is the end to which the rangers are working.

"Once a week they send information to the forest lab's insectarium and herbarium to be analyzed. There we have people, mostly university students, mounting, identifying, analyzing, and researching."

The basic intent of gathering this material is to provide the forest service with information of how to protect trees, he said.

At the bottom of this need for research is the fact that British Columbia loses 670 million cubic feet of wood annually to various causes.

"Right now in B.C. there's a tremendous demand for wood. It's important that we should try to solve any loss.

"The loss to insects alone is huge. People don't hear much about insects but we lose a lot of wood to them," he said.

"When wood is so hard to come by it's important to research the loss of it."

Council Reactivates Citizen Advisers

Oak Bay council Tuesday revived a citizens' advisory planning committee which has been defunct for the past four years.

Formed four years ago with 10 members, the Oak Bay Advisory Committee on Planning met Tuesday night at the invitation of Mayor Fred Hawes.

Five of the original members attended. These are Dr. Allan McGill, Mrs. H. B. McClung, Mrs. D. M. Boyd, Mrs. Peter Bell and Dr. C. B. Conway. Also on the new committee are Allen Guy of the Oak Bay Ratepayers Association, Don Whyte of the Victoria Real Estate Board, Peter Lovrick of the Oak Bay Board of Trade, and architect John Di Castri.

Council members appointed to the committee are Alds. Ian Horne, Frances Elford and Walter Dodsworth.

The mayor said he regretted the delay in calling the first meeting, attributing it to "the many pressing matters facing council in the last two months."

The committee meets again May 20. One of its concerns will be dezoning. Council faces court action in June over a rezoning bylaw affecting Victoria Riding Academy lands.

Plant Shut Down But Fish Still Die

LONG HARBOR, Nfld. (CP) — Dead and dying red herring continue to show up in Newfoundland's Placentia Bay, although a phosphorous plant blamed on circumstantial evidence for the deaths has been shut down since May 2, the plant's production manager said today.

"If it's us, it's sure a long-term thing," George Irving of the Electric Reduction Co. of Canada Ltd. said in an interview. The shutdown has been to permit installation of new effluent purifiers.

Initially, it was thought the $50,000-a-day shutdown would last only a few days. The five-month-old plant was to start up its two big electric furnaces on a test basis last week.

Fisheries Minister Jack Davis said last week in Ottawa a new development, which he did not disclose, could mean a delay of six to nine months in resumption of production at the $40,000,000 Erco plant.

"There has been no indication of anything like this at my level," Mr. Irving said. "We expect to start about the end of the week."

NO NEW EVIDENCE

Asked if there has been any new evidence for or against Erco in the mystery of the cause of the death of fish in Placentia Bay, Mr. Irving said:

"We've had nothing further. It still stands as circumstantial. We've been shut down since May 2 and there are still red herring here."

The company maintains it was not forced to close.

"Maybe we're under the gun, in a sense, but the shutdown was still done on a voluntary basis. Nobody has proof."

The discovery of dead herring by the thousands, showing a strange reddish hue that research found to be due to a blood defect, led to shutdown of the plant and closure of the fishing grounds over half of Placentia Bay. Mr. Davis said there was "growing suspicion" the Erco plant is responsible but there has been no further word of evidence against Erco.

Researchers have been unable to determine the cause of the affliction and are studying samples of the fish at Ottawa. Also, the federal government is working on a formula for compensating hundreds of fishermen unable to work because of the ban on fishing.

Steelworker Strikes Hit Quebec

SEPT-ILES, Que. (CP) — About 700 copper miners in Murdochville, Que., in the Gaspe early today joined about 2,600 iron ore workers in five north-shore Quebec communities as strikes by the United Steelworkers of America spread across the St. Lawrence River.

The Murdochville workers went on strike against Gaspe Copper Mines Ltd. at 12:01 a.m. today in their community 27 miles northeast of Quebec City.

On Tuesday, 1,100 men went on strike against Quebec Cartier Mining Co. in Gagnon and Port Cartier, Que., near Sept-Iles, 325 miles northeast of Quebec City on the north shore of the St. Lawrence River.

Earlier, 1,500 men went on strike against the Iron Ore Co. of Canada at Sept-Iles and Schefferville and the Wabush Mines pelletizing plant and loading dock at Pointe Noire.

The north-shore strikes have tied up Quebec's entire iron ore industry. The three north-shore companies produce about 35,000,000 tons of iron ore a year—about 65 per cent of Canada's total production.

In all the strikes, the union is asking for a $1-an-hour wage increase over three years.

Nixon Can Pack Court If Fortas, Others Leave

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — The United States Supreme Court is an integral part of the American governmental process, shared with the president's executive duties and the legislature—which is Congress.

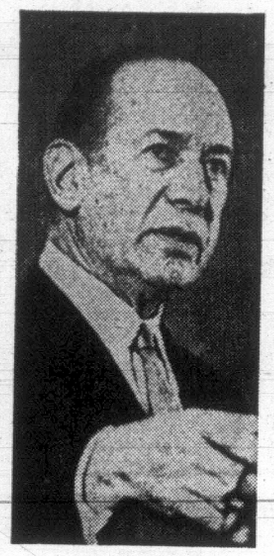
Its interpretation of the American constitution and laws is significant, far more so than Canada's Supreme Court and far more wide-reaching.

In May, 1954, under Chief Justice Earl Warren, the court ruled racial segregation in schools to be unconstitutional—and that set off the drive for black equality which still is rocking the U.S.

Since then, the Warren court has buttressed the rights of accused persons—dangerously so, many policemen would say in the debate about law and order.

Abe Fortas, 58, is one of the nine court justices. For years, he was a high-priced Washington lawyer, drawn here by Franklin Delano Roosevelt's New Deal and privy to presidential decisions — particularly those of old crony Lyndon Johnson.

WARREN
. . . retirement near



FORTAS
. . . on way out?

HAS A PROBLEM

Fortas now has a self-inflicted problem about a $20,000 "research" fee he returned only after a principal in the donor foundation was convicted of stock manipulation.

But much more significant than the fact that Fortas may end his public career under a cloud, say many friends of the Warren court, is the possibility the Fortas case opens the door for President Nixon to alter its makeup and shift the entire philosophic thrust much farther to the right than it has been.

Fortas' indiscretion was to make only belated repayment of the fee for doing some research for the foundation of Louis Wolfson, a wheeler-dealer financier.

Fortas has been collecting fees of $1,000 or more for public speeches and talks. Some other justices have, too, despite a raise approved by Congress in January to $60,000 a year.

The 535 members of Congress, under newly-approved regulations, must report such earnings. Some of those most critical of Fortas have shown substantial fees themselves.

Others have had to report financial holdings which seem, on the face of it, to involve a conflict of interest with impartial consideration of situations coming before their committees.

But, as syndicated columnist Carl Rowan observes, while there ought to be a "single sanitary standard," the nation's highest court has got to stand by itself on Simon-pure principles.

President Nixon has criticized the "activist" nature of the Warren court. He and Warren, thrice California's governor, have been cool to each other for many years.

In last year's election campaign, Nixon said in almost every speech he made that the court had "gone too far in weakening the peace forces as against the criminal forces in this country."

President Johnson, in a highly-political move, tried last year to get Fortas named chief justice to replace Warren. That would have prevented Nixon making his own choice but the Senate defeated the Fortas nomination in what seemed at the time to some a petty and vindictive campaign by Republicans and conservative Southerners.

Now, those reservations appear to be better founded than they seemed, says liberal commentator Clayton Fritchey.

DISTURBED BY EVIDENCE

"Then, as now, the Senate was seriously disturbed by evidence that Fortas had accepted money under questionable circumstances after joining the court."

The Senators also disliked the aura of "cronyism" that the Johnson-Fortas relationship indicated.

Warren is resigning in mid-June and Nixon can replace him with his own man. Fortas may have to resign because of the considerable furore.

Justice Hugo Black is 83. Justice William O. Douglas, 70, wears an electric pacemaker for his heart and John Marshall Harlan is nearly 70.

Presidential terms in the U.S. are limited at most to eight years, members of House of Representatives face re-election very two years and the 100 senators every six years.

But a Supreme Court justice can go on for a long time.

Only one impeachment effort was made and it failed. Hence the political convictions of the men named to the court that has the power to shape the affairs and events of a nation linger long after their chosers may have gone.

Bamberton Pollution Thing of the Past

By MARJORIE PARKER

The phasing-out of a landmark will know to Lower Vancouver Island residents has been completed without one recorded screech of protest.

For many years the cloud of greyish-white dust billowing up from the Ocean Cement Plant at Bamberton has obscured the tourist's eye-view of Saanich Inlet and deadened the lush variegated green of the coastal vegetation to a "blah."

In a pollution-conscious move, Ocean Cement has installed electrostatic precipitators in each of its three kilns.

One his been operational for two years and has been functioning well. Two were installed recently and are now in operation, said company official J. Wintemute.

The precipitators are dust-collecting units.

Previously the atmospheric fallout was less than 5 per cent of the total dust, the remainder was salvaged by an in-plant recovery system. Wintemute rates the new precipitators at more than 98 per cent effective.

The $600,000 outlay for the installation and purchase of the units is mainly a gesture to community relations. Lime saved won't represent a revenue for many years.

The new clean-air program originated at the local level and will enable the company to "more than meet the new polution standards," Wintemute added.

The company has long been aware of the fallout nuisance although employees living within range of the dust have not complained. The dust is merely agricultural lime and is therefore harmless.

Although company officials realize that the dust has been aesthetically aggravating to the general public, the problem has been primarily confined to the many acres of land adjoining the plant and owned by Ocean Cement.

The full effectiveness of the precipitators will not be visible until new growth appears on the foliage next year.

Languages Bill Could Produce Split in Conservative Party

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield has been able to prevent—so far—a wide public split among his MPs on the issue of the official languages bill, Conservative party sources say.

The bill has been redrafted by the government in some of its details in an attempt to mollify the West and is ready for second-reading debate in the Commons.

The government is expected to put the bill before the Commons soon after the omnibus Criminal Code bill gets third and final reading. Creditiste opposition to the abortion section of this bill suddenly collapsed when, political sources said, the Quebec rural party discovered last week that its stand was not so popular as it had thought it was.

The government also has ready its proposed amendments to the National Housing Act but Robert Andras, minister without portfolio who was given responsibility for housing only last week, wants a few more days to get ready for the debate.

Moreover, the government wants to have its new policy on public housing ready for presentation when debate on the NHA amendments opens. This policy has been under feverish preparation for some days.

The official languages bill is likely to be sent to a special Commons committee for detailed study once it clears second reading.

The bill would make both French and English official languages of the federal administration and create bilingual districts in which federal services would be available to the public in both languages.

Mr. Stanfield already has come out in favor of the bill, but some of his supporters in the Commons are against it.

Conservative sources said it is hoped that the vocal opposition to the bill can be confined to a handful of Conservative MPs, though others may vote against it as well.

The government amended the bill—the changes have not yet been made public—after objections to some of its clauses by spokesmen for the four western provinces.

These provinces said they were worried about administration of the courts and promotion for English-speaking Canadians in the federal civil service.

Government sources said the principle of the bill has not been altered but that some details have been changed in an effort to satisfy the West.

Quebec also objected to the bill on the grounds that all Canada, not districts where the minority-language group comprises at least 10 per cent of the population, should be bilingual for federal administrative purposes.

Saigon Draws Political Map to Consolidate Many Villages, Hamlets

By IVER PETERSON

SAIGON (NYT) — The government is quietly redrawing the political map of South Vietnam to show — on paper at least — a loyal administration in every village and possibly every hamlet by the end of the year.

Government officials in charge of the plan say that the process, called village and hamlet consolidation, is intended to streamline rural administration by consolidating various underpopulated and insecure communities with adjoining hamlets and villages that have a functioning government administration.

In private, however, these officials acknowledge, that the consolidation, as directed by President Nguyen Van Thieu, will in effect eliminate in the organizational table those villages that the enemy currently claims are governed by Viet Cong "liberation committees."

There are 2,320 villages in South Vietnam, made up of about 12,730 hamlets. The word "village" is generally used to mean a political unit comparable to an American township, although in some instances in South Vietnam a village is a small aggregation of houses, as in the United States.

About 300 villages are without a functioning government administration, meaning that they are either abandoned by both sides or are wholly controlled by the Viet Cong. These villages will be absorbed by adjoining villages whose principal town, at the least, contains an elected or appointed government administrator.

The hamlets will also be extensively altered by consolidation, but at present some officials believe that the Viet Cong control too many — about 2,600 — to permit the provinces to annex them all to government hamlets.

A high-ranking United States adviser estimated consolidation would mean that more than a thousand hamlets now shown as Viet Cong-controlled or abandoned would no longer be listed as individual units.

Government spokesmen stressed that by joining villages and hamlets in this manner the local government would more effectively be able to direct its forces in the pacification of annexed enemy territory.

Under the current system, each village controls its own local militia and distributes government assistance to its people. When there is no local government, the spokesmen say these tasks must be directed from a distance by persons unfamiliar with local needs and conditions.

Woman Heard Accused Plot Against Wife

A woman witness in Victoria assize court Tuesday testified that, after she spent a night with William Clifford, he told her he was going to "do away" with his wife.

Mrs. Ann Adams was giving evidence at the trial of Clifford, 66, who is charged with the non-capital murder of his wife, Edna, 63, at their home at 1001 North Park Street early on March 15.

She said she and Clifford consumed two bottles of whisky and two cases of beer at a Victoria hotel on the night of March 13.

He was "nervous" on the morning of March 14 and, when she asked him what was wrong, he said he would "do away" with his wife.

Mrs. Edna Clifford died early March 15 in her room at 1001 North Park from a rifle wound in the abdomen. Her husband has pleaded not guilty to the charge of non-capital murder.

ARRESTED IN SHED

Soon after the shooting, Victoria police forced Clifford to leave a shed near his home and arrested him.

Mrs. Adams first said she and Clifford stayed at the Colony Hotel on Douglas Street, but later said it could have been the Gorge Road Hotel "or whatever you call it."

"I wouldn't be certain," she said.

Defence counsel Foster Isherwood asked Mrs. Adams if she and Clifford had much to drink.

"We had quite a bit," she replied. "There were a couple of cases of beer and a couple of bottles of whisky."

Mrs. Adams said she wasn't quite sure how much Clifford drank on the morning of March 14 and she couldn't remember that he had anything to eat during the time they were together.

When they parted outside the Hotel Douglas about noon, she said Clifford was "well under the influence of alcohol."

James Clifford, 34, denied on the witness stand that his father and mother had "a terrific fight" in the early hours of March 15.

HALF HOUR

He said there was an argument and estimated it lasted about 15 minutes.

"Weren't you fighting and scuffling?" asked Isherwood.

"I never fought with my father in my life," James Clifford replied.

Robert Anderson, a boarder at the Clifford residence, said there was "a fight" in the Clifford residence and it went on for about half an hour.

Anderson said he was under psychiatric care and had taken sleeping pills around 11:30 p.m.

"I was pretty dopey," he said.

At about 3:45 a.m., he heard two bangs "like a door slamming." Soon after, he met James Clifford and later his father, who was carring a rifle.

James Clifford said that between 2 and 2:30 a.m. he was talking to his mother when they heard "the cats making a commotion." Then his father appeared on the stairs.

FATHER PASSED

Clifford said his father passed him and said:

"So you want to fight," and kicked him on the upper thigh.

Clifford said he forced his father down to the floor to restrain him. Earlier his mother slapped his father's face during a scuffle, the son said.

Clifford said he had no animosity towards his father and described his mother as a "humanitarian."

"I want to believe there's more of my mother in me than my father," he added.

The trial continued today.

Mount St. Mary Holds Open House

Mount St. Mary will be open to the public Thursday from 2 to 4 p.m.

The open house has been arranged to mark Hospital Week and will allow visitors to see how an extended-care hospital works. They will also be able to see the therapy program in action.

Light refreshments will be served.

Ages of patients range from 32 and 100 years with 40 patients being under 50 years of age. The eldest, Mrs. Annie Dawson, has been at Mount St. Mary for 21 years. There are 128 patients at the hospital.

A divisional therapy program was instituted in December under the direction of Mrs. Flora Simonson.

Nixon's Assets Set; Foundation Planned

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House has issued a financial statement placing President Nixon's worth at $596,000. It also announced establishment of a nonprofit foundation to build a library and museum to house the papers of the Nixon presidency.

Site of the library was not disclosed but tests were being made at Nixon's recently purchased estate in San Clemente, Calif., to determine if that location would be suitable spokesmen said.

The financial statement revealed that Nixon received $326,000 for selling his eight-room apartment in New York City. The figure represented a $64,000 profit over what Nixon paid for the property in 1963.

He agreed to pay about $340,000 including a $100,000 down payment, for five acres of the San Clemente property and its 10-room Spanish style residence. The remaining 11 acres will be held in trust for security reasons until a buyer can be found. That buyer may be the library foundation.

The statement said Nixon has assets of $980,400 and a liability of $383,500 for a net worth of $596,500. Most of the assets were listed as cash, from the apartment sale and from the sale of Nixon's shares in Fishers' Island Inc., a development on an island in Biscayne Bay, Fla., near where Nixon has a summer home.

It said Nixon sold 185,891 shares of the island development for $2 per share, or $371,782. It also showed he paid $71,800 down on his two key Biscayne homes, the total cost of which was $252,800.

The liability consisted of $126,000 in notes and loans payable to banks and others, $54,000 mortgage in the California property, $181,000 owed on the homes in Florida and $22,100 owed on a vacant lot on Key Biscayne.

Twenty-six friends and associates of the President were named trustees of the Richard Nixon Foundation, including Evanglist Billy Graham, Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell; Nixon's brothers Edward and Donald; Welfare Secretary Robert H. Finch, and Nixon's son-in-law David Eisenhower.

Uvic Registrar To Direct Admissions

Ronald Jeffels, the University of Victoria's first registrar, has been named director of admissions.

His new duties will include evaluation of academic records of students seeking admission to the university for the first time, and sharing in development of a province-wide approach to organization of post-secondary courses.

He will also advise secondary schools on university entrance requirements.

Dean Jeffels, 48, became registrar of the university in 1963, and held the post until 1967.

He then became Uvic's first dean of colleges and student affairs, and was given a key position two years ago in planning a system of on-campus colleges, of which the second will be completed this year.

Aircraft 'Fire,' 'Chute Sighting Just Army Games

Police and air-sea rescue officials were notified Tuesday after a woman reported seeing a small aircraft burst into flames over Durrance Lake and a parachute fall from it.

However, the alarm turned out to part of an Army exercise manoeuvere over Heal's rifle range near the lake.

The woman called Saanich police about 4:30 p.m. and said she and three other persons in her car on West Saanich Road observed the incident. She said the parachute drifted over the lake.

Army officials then advised police they were using parachute-type flares in a special exercise. The flares were shot up to a height of 1,000 feet where they are exploded and returned to earth via a parachute.

A spokesman said due to their small size, persons watching from the ground would be confused as to their identity and position.

The army range is near Durrance Lake.

Natural History Group Advises On Planting

Members of the Victoria Natural History Society will act as consultants for work to be done in Oak Bay's native plant park at the corner of Margate and Beach Drive.

They will advise municipal officials on the thinning of trees, planting of new native shrubs and trees, and the removal of non-native plants and trees.

U.S. to Propose Nuclear Talks

WASHINGTON (WP) — The United States early in June will propose to the Soviet Union that the two superpowers meet this summer for the opening round of their long delayed discussion of how to limit offensive and defensive strategic nuclear weapons, administration sources disclosed Monday.

The current plan is to have Secretary of State William P. Rogers meet to set the date with Soviet Ambassador Anatolity F. Dobrynin shortly after Rogers returns here on May 29 from his current round-the-world trip.

Administration officials say that he initial conference session could take place, probably but not yet certainly in Geneva, in July.

A key date on the Nixon administration's calendar is June 4, the day the National Security Council is now scheduled to consider the U.S. negotiating position for what has come to be known as the salt talks, meaning the effort to negotiate a strategic arms limitation treaty.

By that date, officials said, it is expected that the administration's opening proposals and general line of procedure will be ready for President Nixon's final approval.

Nixon agrees, Rogers then would meet with Dobrynin to set a date. American officials believe that the Soviet Union is willing to go ahead with the talks whenever the U.S. is ready. There has been unofficial work from the Soviets to this effect, the Americans said.

Low Increase Noted in Indian Population

By IAN MACDONALD

OTTAWA — British Columbia had the lowest percentage increase rate of any province in 1968 in the growth of its Indian population.

The number increased from 45,152 in 1967 to 46,046 last year, according to statistics released Tuesday by the Indian Affairs Department.

While the province had Canada's second biggest Indian population, next to Ontario's 52,981, the percentage increase of 1.9 was the lowest.

Even tiny Prince Edward Island added nine to its total for the year, bringing the number to 418, but representing a 2.2-per-cent hike.

Highest was Saskatchewan which showed a 3.9-per-cent hike from 32,579 to 33,852.

The figures show that Canada's Indian population increased in 1968 to 237,490 from 239,902 the year before — a national percentage increase of 2.8-per-cent as against the national rate for all Canadians of 1.7-per-cent.

Since 1959, the Indian population has jumped from 179,126 a hike of 32.5-per-cent.

Although infant mortality is 51 per 1,000 live births as against national rate of 22 per 1,000, the life expectancy among Indian men is now 60 compared with the national average of 68.

More than half the Indian population is under 17, with the biggest single age group four and under with some 40,073 children.

Breath Test Doubt Raised in House

By GERARD McNEIL

OTTAWA (CP) — The roadside breath-analysis test for impaired drivers puts too much power in the hands of the police, Hyliard Chappell (L—Peel South) argued in the Commons Tuesday.

Mr. Chappell questioned the accuracy of the balloon test to determine whether a driver's blood alcohol level is above a statutory impairment level.

Speaking during third-reading debate on a major series of amendments to the Criminal Code, Mr. Chappell said provisions should be made for back-up blood and urine tests to give an accused some protection against a faulty balloon test.

The bill would make it an offence to have a breath reading that indicated a blood alcohol level of .08 per cent or more,

Refusal to take the test "without reasonable excuse" would in itself be an offence subject to the same penalties.

WOULD RAISE LEVEL

Jack Bigg (PC—Pembina), a retired RCMP sergeant, said the proposed breath tests will help fill a "terrible gap in the law." However he suggested the impairment level might be set at .1 per cent rather than .08 per cent.

In other business, Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin said Canada will protest to France about its selling wheat to mainland China below levels set under the International Grains Arrangement.

Immigration Minister Allan MacEachen said announcement of government policy on the discretionary power of immigration officers can be expected soon.

And MPs applauded as Harold Winch (NDP—Vancouver East) urged a special bureau to aid members swamped with requests for help in getting passports.

Abortion held the floor, with Mr. Chappell one of the few to diverge, as the debate on the Criminal Code bill continued in the fourth week.

Rene Matte (Creditiste—Champlain) moved that the bill be given third reading six months from now—a standard device to kill legislation.

SUPPORT CLAIMED

Several Creditiste members, including party leader Real Caouette, justified their opposition to the abortion clauses by contending that the public supports the party's stand.

Theogene Ricard (PC—St. Hyacinthe) read a booklet sent him by a Roman Catholic bishop in which more liberal abortion laws were described as "worse than a crime."

Gilles Marceau (L—Lapointe) retorted that MPs must distinguish between sin and crime when they are making law.

Melvin McQuaid (PC—Cardigan), former attorney-general of Prince Edward Island, said abortion amounts to "cold-blooded murder."

Mr. McQuaid said the bill's provisions on firearms, harassing telephone calls, impaired driving, bail, parole, trial by jury and probation include "high points in penal reform."

However the abortion clauses were a tragic abdication of government responsibility and their passage would mark a dark day for Canada.

Salmon Fishing Ban Proposed

LONDON (WP) — An international commission Tuesday urged a ban on salmon fishing outside territorial waters in the northeast Atlantic to forestall disastrous depletion of the species.

But opposition by some European nations may stifle governmental acceptance of the proposal made by the 14-nation Northeast Atlantic Fisheries Commisssion. West Germany, Norway and Sweden voted against the recommendation—although Sweden reportedly proposed stiffer measures—and have three months to register formal objections which would prevent the ban from binding the commission's member states.

Neither Norway nor West Germany, whose fleet now take large salmon catches, have salmon within their national waters, where the commission proposal would allow commercial fishing.

The ban was urged in a communique at the end of the commission's annual seven-day conference here. It was prompted by growing concern that recently intensified harvesting of salmon could lead to their eventual extinction. Although significant commercial salmon fishing in the northeast Atlantic is less than five years old, an expert warned last month that it could kill off the species by the end of this century.

Similar concern led the U.S., Canada and Japan to restrict severely salmon fishing in the northern Pacific, but there are at present no international treaties governing the Atlantic salmon fisheries.

Tuesday's announcement will increase pressure on the international commission for the northwest Atlantic fisheries, which includes the U.S., to protect salmon within its jurisdiction. The commission, which according to a fisheries expert has previously rejected a ban on salmon fishing, meets in Warsaw June 2.

The northwest commission includes the U.S., Canada, Italy and Romania in addition to 10 states which are also members of the northeastern body: Britain, Soviet Union, Denmark, France, West Germany, Iceland, Norway, Poland, Spain and Portugal. Belgium, Ireland, The Netherlands and Sweden also

VIET POLICEMAN 'A MURDERER'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Stephen M. Young (Dem. Ohio) says it is disgraceful that South Vietnam's national police chief, Brig.-Gen. Nguyen Ngoc Loan, will be treated for a leg wound at the army's Walter Reed General Hospital.

Loan, called a murderer by Young in a Senate speech, became known around the world when he was photographed by Eddie Adams of The Associated Press as he executed a bound Viet Cong prisoner.

The dramatic picture, which won a Pulitzer prize, showed Loan firing his pistol within inches of the prisoner's head.

Young said Loan was brought to the United States with his entourage—at U.S. taxpayers' expense to undergo treatment.

"This seems to me to be a disgraceful end to a disgraceful, murderous episode," said Young, a long-time opponent of American involvement in the Vietnam war.

Government officials passed the buck Tuesday when asked about Loan's arrival, length of stay and payment of his bill. A reporter was referred by the hospital to the state department, then to the defence department, the South Vietnamese embassy and back to the hospital without getting any answers.

Young said Loan, who was seriously wounded in street fighting in Saigon, was accompanied by his wife, four children, chauffeur, cook and a military aide.

Few 'Welfare Perpetuals' Expert's Study Reveals

OTTAWA (CP) — The notion that public welfare breeds "a population of parasites" gets almost no support from a study on the nature of welfare assistance in Alberta by Stephen G. Peitchinis, economics professor at the University of Calgary.

Reporting his findings in the magazine, Canadian Welfare, Prof. Peitchinis says there were only a few families in his sample who could be classified as "welfare perpetuals."

His study was based on a random sample of public assistance recipients registered with the North Calgary branch office of the provincial public welfare department.

Prof. Peitchinis says that last October about 49,000 individuals and heads of families, and 44,097 dependents were receiving some form of social assistance in Alberta. In Calgary the total was 18,614, of whom 8,998 were dependents.

"Undoubtedly, there are hundreds of low-income individuals and families who qualify for supplementary social allowances but do not apply for them," Prof. Peitchinis says.

The reasons for this included a feeling by many that any form of public assistance is degrading.

ASKED TO APPLY

"In the course of this investigation, instances were cited of low-income families who were urged by public welfare officers to apply for supplementary income allowances, but refused to do so. . . .

"Such an attitude reflects our society's continued negative view of those who rely on public assistance for the maintenance of a reasonable standard of living, regardless of the circumstances which may have compelled them to do so."

Prof. Peitchinis said his study showed that the majority of public assistance recipients were mothers with dependent children—most of them deserted or divorced—and persons unable to work because of prolonged illness or incapacity.

He later noted that in the mothers' case experts disagree whether society would be better served by providing the family with public assistance or the mother with work—assuming she were physically able to work, employment was available and suitable arrangements could be made for her dependents.

Prof. Peitchinis said that in his study, those "unable to work because of age" were mainly women between 47 and 65 years whose children had grown and become independent. These women never had paid employment.

SOME JUST QUIT

There were also a few men aged 55 to 65 in this category who had lost their employment and skill and left the labor market.

The "inadequate income" category consisted of individuals and families who had some income but the amount was not sufficient to meet their minimum requirements. Although the majority in this group were relatively small, there were a number who had full-time employment and earned average incomes.

The 12 able-bodied persons in the survey sample who were unemployed mostly had histories of short-term unemployment, Prof. Peitchinis said. They had relatively low levels of education and no specific skills in demand. Most had undesirable personality characteristics such as minor physical ailments and psychological problems.

"Because the competitive position of such individuals is relatively weak, the likelihood of their success in the regular labor market is almost non-existent."

He suggested that some sort of "subsidized semi-private market" for such persons should be considered.

"From the standpoint of both individual and social welfare, subsidized employment may be a superior alternative to subsidized unemployment."

Fly-by-Night Operators To Be Curbed

Fraudulent activities of fly-by-night operators has caused Victoria public works committee to take action.

Tuesday the committee appointed Alds. Ian Stewart and Cecil Parrott to act with city solicitor T. P. O'Grady to recommend stronger licensing restrictions and other means to safeguard unsuspecting householders.

The action came after a delegation from the Amalgamated Construction Association of B.C., Victoria Branch, and the Better Business Bureau had met with the committee.

TOO LENIENT

Complaining that city licensing requirements were too lenient, Ald. Stewart said:

"The license is a passport into the homes. Even if no permit is issued an innocent homeowner looks on it as the stamp of approval."

Edwin Phillips, ACA secretary-manager stressed, "A license has to be an endorsement of that person's qualifications."

He said that Victoria was one of the most vulnerable cities to this type of fraudulent contracting.

"With the retirement-age population what it is we are sitting ducks."

William Tindall, BBB manager, said that the city would not be setting a precedent in enacting new legislation to tighten controls.

"Oak Bay recently amended its bylaws, changing them so that anyone soliciting business from door-to-door is required to also buy a peddler's license."

Stressing that the posting of bonds made an effective deterrant, Tindall said that Oak Bay requires that a $1,000 bond be set up for the applicant with an additional $100 being required for each of his salesmen."

Marauding Dogs Harass Sheep On Peninsula

The farmer pointed to the torn carcass of a sheep. It's throat had been ripped, its legs bitten.

"And last week I lost two lambs — raising the total of 36 sheeps killed by dogs in seven years," he said.

"Yet — when I once publicly insisted that marauding dogs should be shot on sight, I was accused by people of being a dog hater, he added.

The farmer is one of several who have complained to Central Saanich police in the past two months of damage being done by stray dogs.

Chief Fred Brownlee admitted he was having lots of trouble controlling stray and marauding dogs.

"Last week we fined people left and right for leaving their dogs to roam about unattended," he said. "We also picked up several unlicenced dogs and turned them over to the pound. But sheep are still being killed."

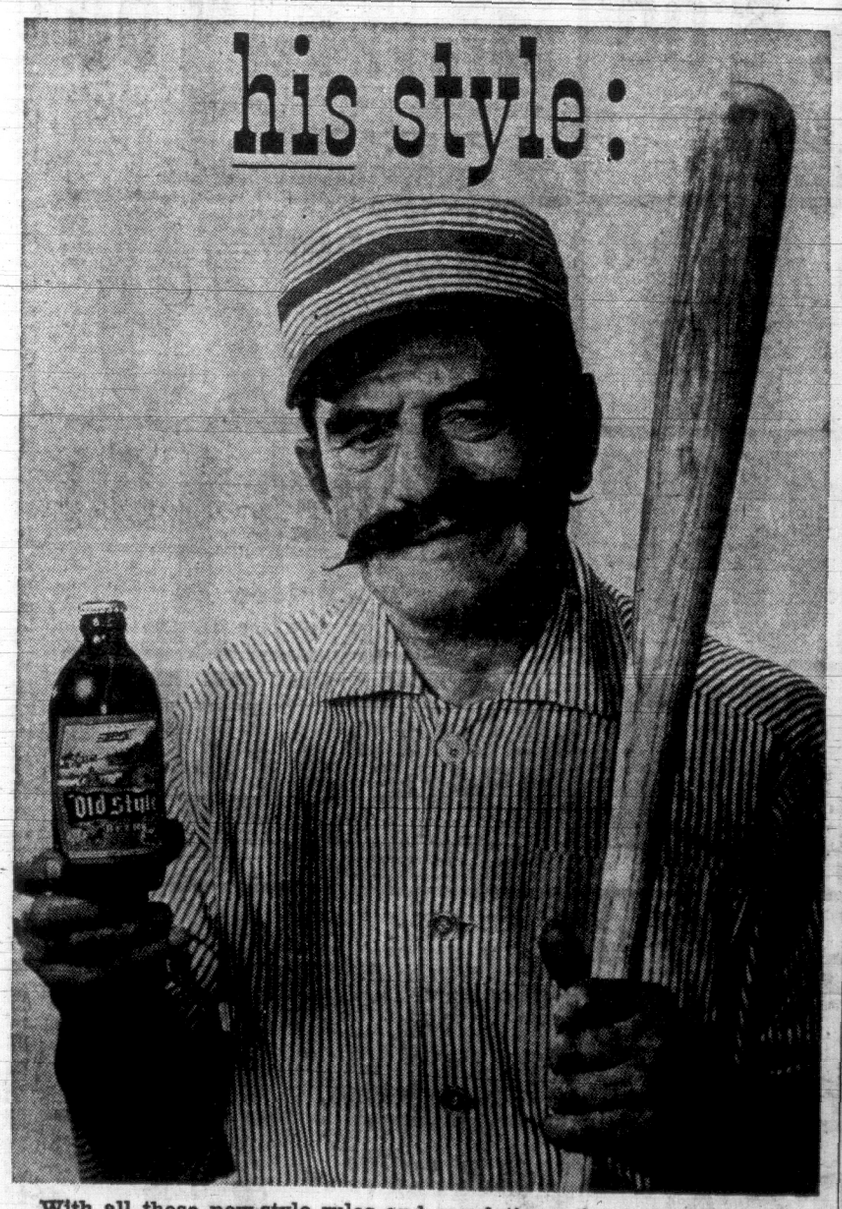
He urged people who leave their dogs out a night to check their teeth when they return home.

"They should do so in the interest of the dog," he said "If they are found on a farmer's field they will be shot on sight."

Students Protest Honorary Doctorate

CALGARY (CP) — A decision by the University of Calgary to award an honorary doctorate degree to Alberta Premier Harry Strom is being objected to by members of the students' council at the university.

The students, in a letter to Chancellor C. C. McLaurin, said the premier does not meet usual standards for an honorary degree from the university.



With all these new-style rules and regulations, the early heroes of Cap Stadium wouldn't recognize the old ball game today. But, they'd still appreciate one style: Old Style. It's still brewed with natural ingredients and plenty of time. Still brewed in B.C. for Old Style flavour.

Let Them Bloom 3 Years

By HILDA BEASTALL

Polyanthus primulas are just now at their most colorful. Gardeners have been buying them to add to their beds and borders for in bloom, the plants are irresistible. As the flowers begin to get less, the impatient gardener wants to know what to do with the plants. The labor-saving plan is to allow them to bloom three years in the same place before lifting and dividing.

Hilda

In the meantime, see that enough water is given to keep them in good condition. Flowering of polyanthuses should continue through May and, under partially shaded conditions, into June.

Whenever flowering dwindles, it is a good plan to gather the few remaining blossoms, putting them into a small bowl for a coffee table bouquet.

Then with a pail of screened leafmould mixed with well dampened seaforest conditioner, go to each plant and spread a surface mulch of two inches under the foliage over the root area.

When finished, the complete soil surface between the polyanthus plants should be covered. This will provide a cool moist root-run during the summer enabling the plants to rebuild for next spring's work of producing flowers.

If your polyanthus primulas have already been in for two or three years and blooms were perhaps not too satisfactory this year, it is wise to lift and divide now.

First remove all remaining flower stems. Lift each plant carefully; shake off surplus soil and gently pull apart into separate sections—each with roots attached.

If laid aside for replanting, be sure to cover the pieces with wet newspaper or wet sacking to prevent wilting and drying of the roots by the air.

Renew the soil with leafmould, screened compost, peatmoss and seaforest. Then replant and water well. Shading may be needed against sun and wind.

Spray with water frequently during early summer.

Answers To Some Questions

By DR. WALTER ALVAREZ

What causes excessive saliva? That is hard to say. For years I suffered much from this, accompanied by painful five-day canker sores in my mouth—often on my tongue. By keeping a record of unusual foods eaten just before a canker sore and the salivation came, I found that the cause was chocolate. When I never ate chocolate again, I never had any more canker sores, and to my surprise and joy, I no longer had the excessive flow of saliva.

Alvarez

Bell's palsy: A woman writes that one side of her face is paralysed with Bell's palsy. The cause of this disease is not well known; it can come overnight, and generally goes away, without treatment, gradually during the course of six or eight weeks.

But if six weeks pass and there is no sign of recovery, some nerve surgeons believe in operating to open up the hole in the skull, out of which the nerve comes. Other surgeons do not advise this. Sometimes after recovery, the affected side of the face remains a bit weak.

What causes bunions? Bunions are caused probably by wearing shoes that are so pointed that the big toe gets pushed far over toward the little toe. By the time a bunion has come, the foot has become deformed, so that the bone at the big toe joint sticks out and rubs against the shoe, causing pain. An orthopedist can remake the joint, and straighten the big toe.

What can be done for a torn cartilage on the knee? Many a football player has to have torn cartilages and ligaments operated on. I imagine the result will depend on the extent of the injury and the skill of the surgeon. I would not have any hope of repairing a torn knee cartilage with hydrocortisone injections. However, once when I tore a tendon in one knee I was well in about two months without any treatment.

Is a blood transfusion ever done into a tissue rather than a vein? Yes; sometimes, I think, in infants whose veins are very small, transfused blood is injected into muscles.

What is syringomyelia? Syringomyelia is a rare inborn defect in the spinal cord. Unfortunately, no one can hope to repair the cord and make it normal, and this is very sad.

Is there any reason for eating cranberries every day? I have heard that cranberry juice takes away the bad smell and some irritation from urine. It may be only an old folk idea, but still sometimes it may work. I have no experience with it.

Is electrolysis dangerous? No, I know of no reason to fear this method of removing unwanted hairs with an electric needle. The objections to it are: (1) It takes time. (2) It costs money. (3) Often the work has to be done over again.

By J.A.H. HUNTER

"My age?" Uncle Fred repeated the boy's question. "You figure it out. The difference between its square and the square of my young brother's age is 97."

How old was Uncle Fred?

Thanks for an idea to: K. Townsend, Pointe Claire, Que.

(Answer Thursday)

Yesterday's Answer: DIP was 592.

Mr. Hunter answers all letters; ideas welcome.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Champlain Tried To Halt Torturing

By BOB BOWMAN

Although it would be difficult to imagine a more rugged man than Champlain, he tried to get the Indians to stop torturing their captives. He told them that the French killed their enemies in battle, but treated their captives with respect.

Bowman

It was fortunate that the Indians did not know what happened to Francois Ravaillac who assassinated King Henry IV in Paris on May 14, 1610. Ravaillac was a poor man, but a religious fanatic and heard that King Henry was planning a war against the pope. He sharpened some metal and attached it to a rough handle. Then, when King Henry was driving down Rue de la Ferronerie in a low carriage, Ravaillac jumped in and plunged the knife into the king's left side. Another blow reached Henry's heart and he died.

Ravaillac was kept in jail until special arrangements could be made for his execution. First he was tortured with red-hot pincers. Then his legs were crushed. He was drawn to Place de Greve in a garbage cart with two priests beside him with their faces averted. Members of the royal family and leading citizens of Paris watched the death ride from their windows while thousands of people screamed curses and poured boiling lead into Ravaillac's wounds.

Finally four white horses were attached to four parts of his body and pulled in different directions until it was torn apart. The people then scrambled to pick up the pieces of flesh.

Even the most cruel of the Indians might have stood back in wonderment if they had been there.

The assassination of Henry was a blow to the development of Canada. Champlain had a long talk with him just before his death and gave him a belt of porcupine quills. The king told Champlain that he had heard his stories about Canada with "pleasure and satisfaction."

ASK ANDY

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a World Book Atlas.

Andy sends a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Craig Zachow, age 10, of Spokane, Washington, for his question:

How do Fahrenheit and Centigrade differ?

We use the Fahrenheit scale for checking the weather and for temperature-taking when we're sick. Scientists use the Centigrade scale almost entirely, as do people who have to test temperatures in lab work and industry. In France and several other countries, the Fahrenheit scale is out of style. The Centigrade scale is used for every kind of temperature-taking.

The difference between ice and boiling water is a matter of temperature and this temperature difference is always the same. Boiling water, naturally, is a lot hotter than ice. But hotter and colder do not tell us very much. We need to know the exact difference between them. This calls for a scale of degrees like the little ladder on the side of a thermometer. It divides the differences of temperature into a number of equal units. Each unit shows exactly one higher or one lower degree. With a temperature scale, we can prove the exact difference between ice and boiling water.

However, sooner or later we meet up with a problem. On the Fahrenheit scale, there are 180 degrees of difference between ice and boiling water. On this scale, water freezes at 32 degrees and boils at 212 degrees. On the Centigrade scale, water freezes at zero degrees and boils at 100 degrees. This is a difference of 100 degrees. But the real difference between ice and boiling water is always the same. The Fahrenheit scale divides it into 180 units and the Centigrade scale divides it into 100 units.

This, of course, means that every Fahrenheit degree is smaller than every Centigrade degree. Actually, it equals 5-9th of the Centigrade degree. And the larger Centigrade degree is equal to one and 4-5ths Fahrenheit degrees, which is 9-5ths. You might say that the Fahrenheit degree equals almost two Centigrade degrees. But this is not exact enough for working out fine temperature differences.

Simpler Scale

You need a little math for changing the two scales back and forth. First, remember where they begin. The freezing point of water is 32 on the Fahrenheit scale and 0 degrees on the Centigrade scale. To switch the two scales, you must either add or subtract that number 32.

To convert Fahrenheit to Centigrade, subtract the 32; then multiply that number by five and divide it by nine. This will give you the Centigrade temperature. To convert Centigrade to Fahrenheit, multiply the Centigrade temperature by nine and divide it by five. Then add the 32 to that number and you have the Fahrenheit temperature. If you work this out carefully, you will find that 77 degrees Fahrenheit equals 25 degrees Centigrade. This is the temperature on a warm summery day. A coolish day of 10 degrees Centigrade will work out to 50 degrees Fahrenheit.

The first temperature scale was worked out by Gabriel Fahrenheit, way back in 1724. It was workable, but there was room for improvement. About 20 years later, a French scientist named Celsius worked out the neater Centigrade scale. It is based on 100 degrees and this was easier to cope with than Fahrenheit's 180 figure. Scientists prefer the simpler Centigrade on all our thermometers.

★ ★ ★

Andy sends a World Book Globe to Cynthia Sides, age 8, of Rockford, Illinois, for her question:

How does water get under the ground?

Well diggers know just how deep to dig down in the ground. They line the walls of a well with bricks that have spongy pores and pockets. Then, as if by magic, water seeps in and fills the well to a certain level. If you take some out, more water seeps in and the level stays more or less the same. This magic is done by ground water. And this ground water is stored down below in spongy rocks and buried layers of silty sand. The top of the ground water comes up to a certain level. When we dig down below this level, ground water on all sides seeps in to fill and refill the well.

The puzzle, of course, is how all this water got itself down under the ground. Actually it came from the clouds above. Some of it wafted down in fluffy snowflakes and some came bashing down in raindrops. Both rain and snow are made of water. After a shower, the plants drink some of the fresh water and some flows away in streams. But a lot of it sinks through the soil down to join the ground water.

$1.5 MILLION GIFT

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Jack Warner's gift last week of $1,500,000 to the University of Southern California's Division of Cinema marked a giant step forward for the oldest film school in the United States.

The long-time boss of Warner Brothers made the donation for the building of the Ann and Jack Warner Hall of Cinema, which will be part of the university's $4,400,000 Centre for the Performing Arts. It will replace the barracks-like buildings that have housed the Cinema school since the Second World War.

Uvic Dialogue On Role In Community

The University of Victoria sits in splendid isolation two miles from the centre of downtown Victoria.

Its geographic separation from the city could symbolize the separation of the academic community from business, industry, labor, government and the taxpayers.

The professors are engaged in research and teaching, but they have little idea what expectations are held for them by various segments of society.

A symposium to examine the role of the universities will be held at Uvic June 23 and 24, and invitations have been sent to representative organizations across the country.

Speakers include Stuart Keate, publisher of the Vancouver Sun, former Attorney-General Robert Bonner, and Professor Eugene Forsey of Carleton University, who has been associated with Canada's labor movement.

Former UBC president Norman MacKenzie will be the after-dinner speaker at a banquet on June 23.

Acting Uvic president Robert Wallace said the symposium is aimed at restoring the balance to a dialogue that "sometimes seems more like a monologue.

"Students and faculty have many opportunities to voice their opinions on activities relating to government and to society in general.

"Apparently no one asks the taxpayer—the one who makes modern universities possible—what he expects of his institutions."

Golden Lion Prize Dropped By Venice Film Festival

By CHARLE FOLEY

VENICE — The Venice Film Festival has put on its democratic hat.

Prize-givings, starlet-showings, the frentic cofmercialization that once supplied a background to these cinematic Olympics are to be banished. And with them will go the murky atmosphere of pressuure and compromise that surrounded the award in past years of the "Golden Lion."

At the next film festival there will be no Leon D'Oro. New director Ernesto G. Laura says: "To participate in the festival must be the real and only prize."

Laura, who has replaced the embattled figure of former director Luigi Chiarini, is, at 37, the moving spirit behind the reanimation of a festival whose glitter has become increasingly tarnished.

LOWEST EBB

Last year matters reached their lowest ebb. Bombings and sit-inswe re threatened, an army of police guarded the Palazzo del Cineman, producers boycotted showings which were derided by students and audience, critics and Communists.

"The kind of public I want to see at the festival frof now on," says Laura, "is not the traditional set of sophisticated wealthy people but students, working people, the young, the middle classes.

If someone wants to come along in evening dress, he wont' turn them away. Nor will we if they wear a pullover. Let everyone dress as he wishes.

"If producers want to organize cocktail parties and receptions, by all means. If they want to import troops of stars and starlets fine—but at their expense. I'm running the festival on a budget of $240,000, and that doesn't leave cash to spare for anyone's free holiday.

"What I wish to do is to organize daily meetings to enable thosetaking part in the festival to see each other and talk. To show good films. And to expand the boundaries of the festival."

What kind of films has Laura in mind?

"First, I won't choose them. That is the work of a committee of seven experts, film critics of every political and cultural color. They'll decide by a majority vote. Incidentally, my own vote will be worth no more than the others. I keep no authoritarian rights in the matter of choice."

However, says Laura (film critic of the Vatican's Osservatore Rofano and editor of the movie journal Black and White) there are certain types of films which venice will not seek out.

"Oliver!, for example, is a very worthwhile film, but wouldn't be shown at Venice. It has no need of a festival to launch it."

A film like Pier Paolo Pasolini's 'Theorem'—subject of a prosecution last year because of its erotic scenes—is, says Laura, festival meat. And at this year's show he wants Pasolini's next work. 'Porcile.'

Man Jailed For Shooting

NANAIMO (CP) — Fernand Gilles Gagnon, 27, of Kirkland Lake, Ont., was sentenced in the British Columbia Supreme Court Monday to four years in prison for firearm offences.

He received a four-year sentence for discharging a firearm with intent to main and a concurrent two-year term for possession of an offensive weapon. He was acquitted of an attempted murder charge.

The charges were laid following an April 3 incident at a hotel in Courtenay when Gagnon fired a shot through a door as three officers attempted to serve a traffic warrant.

Critics Praise Wood Recital

Both Vancouver music critics were warm in their evaluation of a performance by Robin Wood, pianist principal of Victoria Conservatory of Music, at a lunch hour concert at Vancouver Art Gallery recently.

The recital was taped by CBC for FM-AM broadcasts. It will be heard tonight over AM stations commencing at 7:03.

The pianist's program includes a Scarlatti Sonata, Chopin's Berceuse and C sharp minor Scherzo and a four-movement suite by Rhene-Jacques, a French-Canadian teaching sister at the Ecole Vincent d'Indy in Montreal.

Max Wyman of the Vancouver Sun referred to the generally fine quality of the art gallery concert series, then continued: "But we do not often hear music making of such virtuosity, style and finesse as that of Robin Wood.

'BEAUTY, DEPTH'

"His abilities are considerable — emotional and intellectual sensitivity are allied to technical accomplishment to produce playing of beauty and depth."

Lawrence Cluderay in The Province commented: "Nowadays we are accustomed to any amount of technical brilliance from concert pianists, but the profound sense of style and responsive sensibility displayed by Robin Wood at his Vancouver Art Gallery recital Wednesday lunch hour is decidedly rare."

Draft Dodgers Flee 'Hollywood' Navy

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS's 60 Minutes wound up its excellent hour Tuesday night with a report on the life and thoughts of some of the young draft dodgers and deserters who have established themselves in the Kitchener-Waterloo area of southern Ontario.

One young man who fled to Canada several months ago has changed his mind about the method of protest and now plans to return to the United States in time to go into service on schedule.

Others—all very serious and vocal—said they were content with their decisions.

Reporter Mike Wallace, sympathetic to a degree with their evident idealism, called them "the saddest, most subdued young Americans I have ever seen."

PACIFIC WAR THEME

The program probably will cause some waves in the U.S. defence department with its report on the use of 10 navy ships, including the carrier Yorktown, by a Hollywood film company making a movie.

The film is being made in Pearl Harbor and is a story about the fighting in the Pacific in the Second World War. It uses not only ships but also servicemen. The primary question raised was whether, at a time of Vietnam conflict and of high taxation, the navy should lend equipment and men.

Wallace quoted an anonymous defence source as calling the film "a $25,000,000 commercial for a carrier navy."

Darryl Zanuck, head of the company shooting Tora Tora Tora, said the film could not have been made without navy co-operation.

The co-operation cost was never made clear, but Zanuck did concede that a number of obsolete planes to be used in the film were transported from San Diego to Hawaii on the deck of the carrier Yorktown.

South Africa Split with UN Seen Growing

JOHANNESBURG (Reuters) — Ignoring United Nations objections, South Africa is tightening its grip on South-West Africa.

A new law passed by the Cape Town Parliament has removed the financial autonomy of the former German colony and put the basis of its economy—mining, agriculture, fishing and communications—under South African control.

Though the transfer of authority makes South-West Africa almost a fifth province of the South African Republic, the South African government insists that it has acted in accordance with its League of Nations mandate over the territory, dating from 1919.

The mandate was terminated by the United Nations but South Africa does not recognize the UN decision and has ignored the demands from the world organization to quit the territory.

Convict's Escape Bid Results in One Death

MONTREAL (CP) — A convict's frantic bid for freedom in a stolen penitentiary garbage truck ended Monday in the death of a Montreal police constable and injuries to five other persons.

Constable Gilles Boutin, 29, of suburban Roxboro, the father of a one-year-old son, was killed when the speeding three-ton truck ran over him at a north-end intersection.

The convict, Jacques Morin, 30, was recaptured after his truck smashed into the police ambulance that Constable Boutin and his partner had swung into position as a roadblock at the intersection.

The other policeman in the ambulance, Jacques Desmeules, jumped clear just before the crash but Constable Boutin was hit by the truck, which sideswiped another vehicle, jumped the sidewalk and tore a service station's gasoline pumps from their moorings.

Morin, serving a 14-year term for bank robbery in St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary, stole the truck from the penitentiary bakery and crashed through a fence to freedom.

The truck was spotted heading south into Montreal, and constables Boutin and Desmeules were ordered to set up a roadblock with their police ambulance at the intersection of Papineau and Villeray.

Police said the escapee lost control of the heavy vehicle after shots were fired at it by pursuing police.

Injured were Constable Desmeules, cut by flying glass, two women pedestrians knocked down by the truck and a man and a woman whose car was sideswiped and forced into a lamp standard.

Nurse Queries Pulse Routine

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — Is it really necessary to take the pulse, temperature and breathing rate of every hospital patient every day?

The whole business is a ritual that is of questionable accuracy, says a federal health department study by Pamela E. Poole, a nursing consultant, made public Tuesday.

There may, in fact, be no real need for taking these vital signs every day from everyone because medicine has changed so much.

Miss Poole, a 1949 nursing graduate of Montreal's Queen Elizabeth Hospital, who holds a master of science from University of California in Los Angeles, took a team of observers into three large general hospitals to check on this time-consuming, and therefore costly, piece of hospital routine.

PAMELA POOLE

She thinks other routine procedures could stand a hard look, such as bathing every patient in the early morning when patients want to sleep.

NEED EXAMINATION

Their findings prompted a series of recommendations centring on a suggestion that hospitals carefully examine the relevancy to modern medicine of routine temperature, pulse and respiration recording.

Miss Poole suggests that hospitals select the patients for vital-sign measurement on the basis of the doctor's assessment of the need for this information.

The study group made pulse, temperature and respiration checks of patients after the regular nurses had done so, and with the knowledge of the regular nurses. Even so, they found some odd divergencies.

In two of the three hospitals, differences in temperature measurements were found. In all three, there were significant difference in pulse rate. And in the two hospitals where respirations were counted, differences also were significant.

"It may be that routine taking of these measurements for all patients breeds an attitude of the part of nursing personnel that most patients' vital signs fall in the normal range," says the report.

Heavy Smokers Quit: Get Abnormalities

By STUART AUERBACH

BAL HABOUR, Fla. (WP) — Smoking is not just a habit but is akin to drug addiction, a tall blonde 19-year-old college freshman told the American Psychiatric Association last week.

Reporting on a special project she did last year for an advanced high school biology class, Judith A. Ulett said that heavy cigarette smokers suffer abnormal brain wave patterns when they stop smoking for just one day.

These abnormalities disappeared after the 10 heavy smokers who took part in the study had two cigarettes within five minutes, Miss Ulett reported.

She plans to do further research to see if the brain wave abnormalities go away after a long period of not smoking.

Miss Ulett, a freshman at Trinity College, San Antonio, Tex., studied under the direction of her father, Dr. George A. Ulett, who is chairman of the department of psychiatry at the University of Missouri school of medicine, St. Louis. Dr. Turan M. Ital, the assistant chariman of the department, also took part in the study.

Miss Ulett said her findings are "of crucial importance" because they show that changes in the body's brain activity accompanied the withdrawal of cigarettes from a heavy smoker. "Most authors state that smoking is a habit, satisfying primarily a psychological need," Miss Ulett said.

Miss Ulett reported that the men who stopped smoking became restless, drowsy and ill at ease. Their pulses slowed down and their blood pressure increased after they stopped smoking. The men in her study ranged from 16 to 21 years of age and all smoked at least one pack of cigarettes a day.

"Our results support the contention that tobacco smoking is a complex phychosomatic problem, analogous to drug addiction," she said.

FOUR YOUTHS JAILED IN RACIAL DISORDERS

TACOMA (AP)—Four young men received jail sentences Tuesday but a curfew was lifted as tension diminished in the wake of weekend racial disorders that led to the wounding of a policeman and the arrest of 35 persons.

Policeman Herman Knaack, 35, shot in the side during Sunday night's disturbance, continued in critical condition Tuesday in a Tacoma hospital.

Profs Must Teach Senate Probe Told

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Long shoreman - philosopher Eric Hoffer and a Columbia professor have warned Congress that radicals are ruining universities and the fault lies partly with faculty members who abandon teaching in favor of plush research jobs.

"The American universities will not recover from these blows for decades, but if they are to last that long (they) will have to make use of strong means," Dr. Jacques Barzun, 61, a Columbia history professor, told a house education subcommittee here.

"You need strong men now," the self-educated Hoffer, 66, said of college administrators. "you can't wait . . . you have to have the courage to lay your life down. There is no courage any more."

Hoffer, a member of the president's commission on violence, testified before Sen. John L. McClelland's permanent investigations sub-committee, the third congressional unit to look into campus violence.

TAME VICTIMS

Hoffer said radicals have found college presidents "tame victims" and have developed "a taste for academic flesh" which has "nothing to do with grievances."

Barzun, author of a recent book entitled "The American University," said colleges are reaping the results of a gradual 25-year shift from emphasis on teaching to research.

Hoffer agreed. "You've got to make them dish out," he said of professors. "The professor has to teach." He said the college rule should be: "Anybody who wants to do just research, get the hell out of here."

The suave, neatly dressed Barzun, a Columbia faculty member for 42 years, including a decade as dean of the faculties, spoke politely and quietly with a scholarly air. Hoffer, a retired longshoreman and migratory worker from San Francisco who gained fame as a philosopher and writer, shouted at the senators, swore and laughed. He wore no tie and his checked shirt hung out in front.

HAVENS OF DISCUSSION

Barzun said colleges should be havens of "discussion, civility and decent behavior." Hoffer said college "is not a place for salvation" or a time to "solve the Negro problem or the problems of the cities" but rather a time to "train the mind."

"The grievances are on the side of the universities and colleges," Barzun said. "Work disrupted, property defaced, libraries damaged, scholars manhandled, their research papers burned, the thought and speech of everyone contaminated and debased."

The students want tame enemies and this is why they specialize on the campus," Hoffer said. ". . . They can make history! They have power! It's intoxicating."

"They have a taste for academic flesh. They want to kill them! They want to eat them!"

THINKING OF SELLING
Everyone says "WE TRADE HOMES," but may I suggest respectfully that the above advertised homes, OR any other homes, can be brought on a "guaranteed sale" plan for your own home which gives you complete control, benefits none but yourself, and is simple to arrange. Undoubtedly, you have worked hard for your present home, and wish to make the best possible buy of your next home. A competent, experienced, hard worker will work for YOU. Five minutes chatting with RYAN may be worthwhile.

CRITICAL CABINET DEBATE HAMMERS OUT AMENDMENTS

Languages Bill Modified for West

By ANTHONY WESTELL

OTTAWA — The cabinet has agreed to modify the Official Languages Bill to try to meet objections from western Canada. Amendments to be introduced when the legislation goes to the Commons committee for detailed study, propably next week, are expected to include:

Westell

● A guarantee that general ability, and not command of the French language, will continue to be the qualification for jobs in the federal public service.

● A provision limiting the use of French in magistrates' courts and other criminal courts administered by the provinces.

It is not yet known if these and other concessions will be sufficient to dissuade the prairie provinces from asking the Supreme Court of Canada to rule that the languages act would be unconstitutional.

But the changes in the bill should certainly ease political pressures for both the cabinet and the Conservative opposition.

The cabinet was threatened by a serious division when Secretary of State Gerard Pelletier, who will administer the languages act when it is law, resisted changes in the bill advocated by Justice Minister John Turner.

There was a critical period when Turner might easily have refused to take responsibility for the bill in the Commons because it was not satisfactory. But this split was averted by a compromise after a tough debate last week.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield is wholly committed to the principle of the bill, which is to guarantee equal treatment for the two official languages within the federal jurisdiction across Canada. But about 20 of his backbench supporters, mainly from rural western Canada, have been equally strongly opposed — claiming to reflect grassroots feelings in their ridings.

The danger of a deep division in the Tory ranks on this fundamental issue of national policy has been apparent for several weeks.

It intensified recently when John Diefenbaker emerged as a public critic of the government bill, challenging Stanfield's policy and providing an alternative leadership for the western rebels in the parliamentary caucus.

If the amendments to the bill succeed in quietening the west's fears, they should also pacify the Tory critics in Ottawa and make it easier for the party to present a united front in the Commons.

Prime Minister Trudeau sent copies of the bill to provincial premiers last October. At the same time, Justice Minister Turner circulated the draft legislation to provincial attorneys-general.

This did not prevent public misunderstanding of the federal policy, particularly on the prairies. Many westerners were led to believe that inability to speak French — and the absence of a French cultural background to assist them to learn the language — would put them at a prohibitive disadvantage in seeking jobs in a bilingual civil service, in the armed forces and in federal corporations such as Air Canada.

This fear ignores the fact that the public service has been committed to a policy of bilingualism for several years, during which there has been a marked increase, rather than a decline, in hiring of English-speaking Canadians.

It ignores also the new techniques of language teaching being used in the federal service, which make the learning of French a stimulating experience rather than a hopeless chore, as it might have been for many in their schooldays.

But these reassurances can be underlined, without in any way changing the principle of the bill, by providing a positive guarantee that lack of French — or lack of English for a French-speaking candidate — will not be a bar to employment in the federal service.

The concern of the western governments that the bill may be unconstitutional has grown mainly from a clause providing for use of French — or English in French-speaking areas — in criminal courts.

The federal government claims the right to legislate for criminal courts because the Criminal Code is under its jurisdiction. Some provincial governments argue this is an unconstitutional invasion of their rights because administration of the law is their responsibility.

In practice, the provincial critics fear a situation in which they would have to provide bilingual magistrates, judges and court services at great trouble and expense to satisfy only a theoretical need.

As it stands, the bill hardly justifies such fears. It is merely permissive, providing that an accused can specify in which of the official languages he wants his case to be heard, and the court can agree if it appears that the proceedings can be conducted effectively in that language.

In other words, the magistrate or judge has discretion in deciding which language is to be used.

But the cabinet has agreed to introduce even more flexibility into this clause. One amendment being considered would say that bilingual courts would operate only in disgricts officially declared to be bilingual — that is, in a district in which at least 10 per cent of the population have a mother tongue (French or English) other than that of the majority.

While these and other changes in the bill under discussion are obviously not of major importance in them-

'War Outbreak Unavoidable'

TEL AVIV (AP)—An Israeli cabinet minister said Tuesday night that war with Egypt is unavoidable and will break out as soon as Egypt is fully rearmed by the Soviet Union.

Police Minister Eliahi Sasson told a rally in Ashkelon: "The Egyptian harassment on the Suez Canal is nothing but a dress rehearsal for crossing the canal."

Egypt will go to war because "it does not want peace under any circumstances" and cannot tolerate Israeli occupation of the Sinai Desert much longer, Sasson said.

Sporadic artillery, mortar and light weapon clashes occurred along a 20-mile northern stretch of the Suez Canal Tuesday night and into today, an Israeli army spokesman said.

SOLDIER KILLED

One soldier was killed and six wounded, the spokesman said.

The spokesman denied an Egyptian report that Arab gunfire had destroyed an Israeli military vehicle and wounded its 20 occupants Tuesday. The spokesman said two Israelis were wounded when unidentified gunmen fired on a civilian car in the occupied west bank Jordanian town of Jenin.

A curfew was imposed on the town of 14,000.

In Nablus and Ramallah, police made several arrests in an effort to head off trouble in the occupied territory when Israel marks its independence day Thursday. Leaflets signed by the Al Fatah guerrilla organization were distributed in Nablus calling for strikes and demonstrations Thursday.

Fortas Inquiry Proposed

See Page 39

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Republican congressman proposed today that the house judiciary committe initiate an inquiry which could lead to impeachment proceedings against Supreme Court Justice Abe Fortas.

The justice department announced that Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell told the congressman, Rep. Clark MacGregor, (R — Minn.) that constitutionally he "Could have no objection to actions which are legally within the prerogatives of the house."

MacGregor hand-delivered a request for a preliminary inquiry into Fortas' affairs to Rep. Emanuel Celler, (D — N.P.,) chairman of the judiciary committee.

He asked for a meeting of the full committee Tuesday and asked that Fortas and Mitchell be invited to appear.

Celler later told the house that he and his committee's ranking Republican, ep. William M. McCulloch of Ohio, had reached agreement on a course of action.

To Rep. H. R. Gross, (R. — Iowa), who has called for Fortas' impeachment and who asked what course of action had been decided upon, Celler said only:

"I'm sure the gentleman will be astisfied with the action to be taken in the not too distant future."

Celler said he would discuss MacGregor's proposal with MacGregor later today.

Cong Peace Package Open To Point-by-Point Debate

PARIS (AP) — The Viet Cong repeated today that their 10-point peace plan forms an inseparable package but said each of the points is open for discussion at the Paris peace talks.

In an interview with Agence France-Presse, the French news agency, Mme. Nguyen Thi Binh of the National Liberation Front, political arm of the Viet Cong, implicitly rejected a proposal for the Saigon government to break up the package.

The Saigon government said it was willing to negotiate on some details of the plan but termed unacceptable three of its essential provisions—a unilateral American withdrawal, a coalition government and "neutralization" of South Vietnam.

Mme. Binh's replies, given in writing, were mostly a repetition of passages from the 10-point plan submitted to the peace talks last Thursday by the front's chief delegate, Tran Buu Kiem.

In one verbal exchange with the interviewer, she explained that the front's proposal for a coalition government in Saigon did not modify its earlier demand for what it called a "peace cabinet."

This clarified one point that has been puzzling southern allied negotiators. Kiem's plan called for agreement on a "provisional coalition government" which would hold elections for a constituent assembly. The plan left in doubt whether the front was willing to negotiate such an agreement with the present Saigon government.

Cautious Nixon Speech Anticipated

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon, responding to what associates say is a public demand for a summation of the Vietnam situation, goes before the country tonight to give what is expected to be a cautiously optimistic assessment of peace prospects.

White House press secretary Ronald Ziegler said the speech, to be broadcast live at 7 p.m. PDT on television and radio, will contain some new material, but cautioned against expecting announcement of a peace breakthrough.

Nixon associates also said the president's speech will outline how matters now stand in light of the Viet Cong's 10-point peace proposal rather than announcing the breaking of new ground.

An official said there would be no pledge for unilateral U.S. troop reductions.

Heavy Action In Vietnam

SAIGON (AP) — Casualty tolls mounted today as heavy fighting continued across South Vietnam for the third day. Military sources claimed more than 1,800 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong were killed, many of them by American bombers, helicopter gunships and artillery.

Military sources estimated more than 100 U.S. troops were killed and several hundred were wounded since the upsurge in enemy attacks Sunday night.

South Vietnamese losses were put at 273 troops killed, 748 wounded and 11 missing.

NEWS BRIEFS

$100,000 in Ransom

BETHPAGE, N.Y. (UPI)—Roy Fuchs branch bank manager told police that four men kidnapped his wife and three children today and that he ransomed them with $100,000 of the bank's money.

Mid-Air Crash

ROCHESTER, Eng. (Reuters) — Three British officers were killed today when two army helicopters crashed in mid-air at a demonstration for government ministers and senior military officers.

Air Crash Kills 5

EDMONTON (CP)—RCMP said today five men were killed when a twin-engined aircraft owned by Mei Air Ltd. of Swift Current, Sask., crashed about 10 miles east of here on a scheduled flight from Edmonton to Regina.

Fire Sweeps City

TROMSOE, Norway (Reuters) — Fire raged through the heart of Tromsoe, "capital of the Arctic," for seven hours early today, destroying five blocks of stores, offices, and homes and causing damage estimated at 70,000,000 crowns ($10,000,000).

Martial Law In Malaysia

QUEBEC TEACHERS PROTEST

QUEBEC (CP) — About 5,000 teachers set out today on a five-mile march on Quebec's national assembly to call attention to almost two years of fruitless contract haggling.

The teachers planned to "demonstrate silently" in front of the assembly buildings for half an hour and then march another three miles to a teach-in at the Coliseum.

Air Strike Talks Resume

MONTREAL (CP) — Federal government mediators today began talks with Air Canada and Union representatives in another attempt to end the airline strike.

The mediators are Bernard Wilson, assistant deputy labor minister, and William Kelly, head of the labor department's conciliation and arbitration branch.

They met first with the 15-man delegation from the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers in a room on the ninth floor of a federal government building in downtown Montreal.

After about 15 minutes, the mediators met with a seven-man Air Canada negotiating team, waiting in another room on the same floor.

Neither side had any comment for reporters on the resumption of talks, which broke down again last Friday.

The mediators met with company representatives for 50 minutes, held a second meeting with the union which lasted about 20 minutes and then broke for lunch.

Racial Rioting Takes 100 Lives

KUALA LUMPUR (CP)—The Malaysian government mobilized its army reserves as fighting between Chinese and Malay mobs continued in this capital city tonight despite a round-the-clock curfew ordered in an effort to stop rioting in which at least 100 persons are believed to have died.

The government assumed wide police powers.

An official proclamation announced here will permit the government to hold secret trials, suspend or amend any written law, deprive any person of citizenship, acquire or dispose of property, enter and search any premises, suspend incomplete elections in any state and institute court changes and set penalties.

More battling was reported in the Malay settlement of Kampong Bahru, where the first fighting broke out Tuesday night. Indians there were reported fighting the Malays. It was the first report of Indian involvement.

In downtown Kuala Lumpur, two persons were reported killed by soldiers who fired at persons stoning them from a downtown apartment.

The violence apparently resulted from the refusal of the Malaysian Chinese Association, the Chinese member of the governing coalition, to take part in a new government because of setbacks it suffered in the general election Saturday.

Heavy smoke billowed up from shops, houses and Malay kampongs set afire throughout the city of 500,000 people. Several thousand refugees poured into police stations, seeking sanctuary from the riots which destroyed or threatened their homes.

Police records showed 19 houses destroyed by fires, but a hurried survey of the downtown area indicated many more shops and homes destroyed by flames.

Correspondents today saw 30 houses destroyed by fire in one district less than a mile from the city centre.

Deputy Premier Tun Abdul Razak claimed today the situation "is under control."

late Tuesday.

Motorists Dragged From Cars

More than 100 cars, trucks and motorcycles, smashed to pieces or charred, littered the streets. There were reports Tuesday night that motorists were dragged from cars by mobs and killed.

Associated Press correspondent Brian Gomez saw a mob of 3,000 Malay youths storm a suburban village Tuesday night, "leaving a trail of bodies, smashed shops and burned cars."

The 24-hour curfew was extended to three nearby states late Tuesday.

Government leaders met with Chinese and Malay groups in an effort to end the hostilities. Tan Siew Sin, president of the Malaysian Chinese Association, told reporters he was prepared to reconsider the decision not to participate in the new government, but he said nothing about this in a television appeal for calm.

U.S. Goes Ahead With ABM Plans

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Despite earlier assurances to the contrary, the Pentagon is now in the process of constructing the Safeguard Antiballistic Missile system without authorization from Congress which is deeply split over the issue.

The controversial nature of the ABM question burst into the open once again today in a clash between two leading scientists over whether the system is needed and whether it might provoke the Soviet Union to escalate the arms race.

Dr. Jerome B. Wiesner, provost of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, warned at a Senate hearing that President Nixon's Safeguard program would be interpreted by Moscow as the first step in a vast defence of the American population, prompting the Soviet to develop larger and more sophisticated weapons.

But Dr. Edward Teller, widely known as the "father of the H-Bomb," said development of the ABM would have a "stabilizing influence" on the arms race and would be preferable to deployment of more aggressive systems.

The two men testified before the Senate foreign relations subcommittee on disarmament, which reopened hearings on the Safeguard.

The Pentagon, meanwhile, sought to clarify which parts of the Safeguard system are already being built.

The defence department said in a statement it is purchasing ABM missiles for test firings at Kwajalein, in the South Pacific, and at White Sands, N.M.

It said under contracts awarded by the Johnson administration, production is going ahead on a long range radar, called Par, and on other electronic items which take a long time to build. These will be put on operational sites "if deployment is approved by Congress," the statement said.

Canada Week All for One But Quebec for None of It

Canada Week, the first-ever week to promote the unity and image of Canada, has gone a little overboard in accurately reflecting that unity and image:

Premier Bertrand of Quebec refuses to have anything to do with it.

"Le tres Honorable Pierre Elliott Trudeau and tous les other provincial premiers have come out in complete support.

Their names are affixed to the advance literature for the May 25-31 observance as co-chairmen and they have all sent letters saying its a swell idea.

Premier Bertrand sent a letter, too, but it is not included with the others.

IT'S ON FILE

In fact, it's on file at the Montreal headquarters of the Canada Week Committee which is "a non-political organization" which aims "to unite all Canadians, English-speaking and French-speaking, in one common purpose — that of promoting better knowledge of our country."

The committee's motto deftly designed as a bilingual maple leaf, says Le Canada C'est Tout and-or Canada Is Everything.

The Times, curious to know if the motto should more correctly be Canada Is Everything Minus One, today phoned the Canada Committee headquarters collect.

Andree Camirand, a public-relations lady with a voice that leaves one aware of how vive le difference is, said that today most of the committee's people were in Toronto clebrating the opening of English Canada's committee branch headquarters.

Mlle Camirand was asked how come there was no testimonial from Premier Bertrand to place beside Premier Bennett's "let us go forward together, united as one Canada; mindful of our past achievements and with faith in the future."

NO INVOLVEMENT

She said Bertrand had written to say that he didn't want to get involved with anything this controversial while he is in the midst of a struggle to retain leadership of his Union Nationale party.

And also, although the premier didn't say this, many Quebecers are expecting a fall election (who isn't?) and hands are being played close to the vest.

Asked if the Times could get a copy of the letter, Mlle Camirand said that would be all right, but warned "it's in French."

In the meantime, Canada will go forward together, or as together as possible.

Arthur Mayse

Back when I was struggling like a fly in molasses to spring myself from a Vancouver high school, my future was an open book. I would work reasonably hard, save my money, and retire at age 40 to a foreshore shack near Campbell River.

There, with a dog for company, a boat on the beach and a salmon rod leaned handy to my plank door, I would enjoy my declining years.

Although I didn't realize the fact at the time, my plan left much to be desired. For one thing, it failed to include the wife and children without whom shack, beach, boat and all the rest would be as nothing. It also overlooked a human reality that time and experience have impressed on me. This is that of all double-edged gifts to covet, retirement at 40 . . . or 50 . . . or 60 . . . is the one least worth having.

If you're young, you may not believe this. I didn't, until it was impressed on me by the circumstances of a free-lance writer's life.

It was a good life in many ways, but at intervals it left me with time on my hands.

There are some writers who have no sooner exhausted one idea than they're busy on the next. I envy them their disciplined approach, but it didn't work for me. There was always a gap between stories. If I'd turned out a book-length, the fallow period that followed might last for half a year.

★

And that time off—that enforced holiday—taught me to greet the end of a work-session with mixed feelings.

It was great for a while. We went fishing. We hooked and sliced happily around golf courses less crowded than the weekend would find them. But my wife had her own work to do, and presently I would realize yet again that work is one of man's necessities.

Then, soon or late, a story idea would click, and I would be happily bashing my typewriter again.

But the lesson stuck, and I remain deeply sorry for the man who yearns for work with all his being and is denied a job.

One of the wrongest, cruellest features of our society is that so often it condemns good men to that fate.

On the surface, the man who is pensioned out of the armed forces in his forties has it made. This is so only if he can find new work to fill his days. One of the rarely-mentioned tragedies of our city and our times is that so many retired servicemen are unable to do so.

For their well-being, and for the sake of every middle-aged unemployed man with a will to hold a job, I could wish the "over 40" barrier torn down wherever it exists.

It was youthful folly that caused me to set that age, which I left behind a good few years ago, for retirement.

★

Then when should a man retire?

In the ideal society which we are still far from achieving, I think he will be encouraged to work until he feels that he's ready to down tools. But he should also be given a chance to return should he find that freedom from the Monday-through-Friday work routine isn't to his taste!

Even when he has reached the standard retiring age of 65, many a man would be only too glad for a reprieve.

A couple of weeks ago, I talked to a veteran school principal who surely should welcome the day when he won't be burdened with the complexities of a demanding job. His number is coming up in a year or two. I asked him if he was looking forward to his freedom. He gave me a lemony smile, and said, "I dread it."

Any number of times in recent years, science has predicted a computerized world in which a few will work, while the rest absorb culture or merely pass their days in idleness.

Unless science can also free future men of the need to work, that life would be hell on earth.

ROSY-CHEEKED ROADRUNNERS of Blanshard Elementary School are still waiting for playground at their new school—but in the meantime they have their own private street. This section of Blanshard, closed to traffic, will become part of urban renewal housing project. In the meantime it's fine for spring sports practice, even if the hastily-drawn lane lines are wriggly. Only problem—backtop bruises and scrapes worse than grass. (Times photo by Bill Halkett.)

PRISON FAST

Seventeen Pounds Lighter

By JOHN SLINGER

Muriel Azmier, "on top of it" but about 20 pounds lighter, was released from Oakalla Prison Farm today after her 14-day sentence was shortened three days for good behavior.

The 57-year-old Ottawa grandmother and Betty Andrews, the 22-year-old Victoria mother of a nine-month-old son, came out of jail in as good spirits as they entered it May 3.

They chose the jail term rather than pay $50 fines for taking part in an antiwar sit-in at HMC Dockyard.

Mrs. Azmier refused to take solid food during her stay in Oakalla. A veteran peace marcher and champion of non-violence, she said she received "every care and consideration" as she subsisted on water.

LOST 17 POUNDS

Speaking from Vancouver, Mrs. Azmier said her longest previous fast had been five days and even then she took fruit juices.

She neglected to get weighed "in the excitement" of getting out this morning, but estimated her 11 days of nothing but water drained away between 17 and 20 pounds.

Mrs. Andrew had been treated well, said Mrs. Azmier. The younger woman was returning today to her son here. She stayed in a cabin with young people at Oakalla and worked on a gardening crew.

Mrs. Azmier said there was only "a small confrontation" during her stay.

SPIRITUAL STRENGTH

The prison staff didn't know quite how to deal with a person on a fast. Their only previous experience had been with Doukhobors and they would have preferred to see their new prisoner kept in hospital.

"They were unhappy for a day or two until they were assured that I had the spiritual strength to keep on top of it."

Spiritual strength was no problem, she added. "One doesn't fast with hostility.

"Unless you do it with love and understanding, it won't work. Any you'll probably get sick."

She estimated it will take some two week's rest with friends in Vancouver for her physical strength to be restored.

HOLD WORK SHOPS

Then she plans to review the recent happenings and study some more non-violence, she said. Mrs. Azmier and her husband are likely to return to Ottawa for the summer where she expects to present non-violent workshops.

Mrs. Azmier said she would like someday to return to Victoria, "as we all would in the evening of our lives," but she says she can't settle anywhere "with the world's children in such danger."

The Vietnam war is her biggest foe, but she speaks of "the utter horror and futility" of any war.

Hydro Starts Bi-Monthly Meter Checks

B.C. Hydro will read most customers' meters every other month in a streamlining move aimed at greater economy.

Customers will continue to be billed monthly with the interim bill based on average consumption adjusted for the season. Any difference between the intermim billing and actual consumption will be adjusted on billings the month meters are read.

Large commercial and industrial accounts will still have monthly readings and for customers on the budget payment plan there will be no changes.

NO JOB LOSSES

For customers whose average cost of electricity and gas is under $6 monthly, there will be only a bill every second month when their meter is read.

There are about 14 meter readers covering Greater Victoria and none will lose their jobs as a result of the change, said personnel manager H. H. Lindstrom.

Their work routine will be adjusted but details will have to await the change next month.

In Vancouver a company spokesman said savings in postage alone for the 650,000 customers will be substantial. Information letters on the change are being mailed out at the rate of about 30,000 a day.

Highly Respected City Contractor Dies at 73

A highly respected Victoria contractor who built scores of homes in the Victoria area during his many years of business died Tuesday evening.

Victor Llewellyn Leigh, 3200 Beach Drive, became more than a contractor to his many customers, taking a personal interest in the young families that bought his houses.

Born in Victoria, he was 73 when he died.

He is survived by his wife, Matilda; a brother, Byron, also of Victoria; a sister, Mrs. Llewella Snodgrass of Stanford, Conn., and nieces and newpews.

Funeral service is privare.

Fun Weekend Starts Friday

It's that time of year again.

Beginning this Friday, Victoria will erupt with the annual Victoria Day celebrations—a special one this year because it is the 150th anniversary of Queen Victoria's birth.

Grade V students throughout the city will participate in the annual birthday "party" at the legislative buildings, organized by the IODE in conjunction with Greater Victoria school board. It starts at 10:45 a.m.. Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson will address the children for the first time.

For the Victoria Day parade, Monday, there are entries from all over British Columbia and the northwestern United States.

Portland is sending its rose festival float and Seattle will have its police drill team on hand.

The 48 bands participating range from the Mt. Vernon High School Bulldog Marching Band to the Silver Threads Kitchen Band.

The parade will be slightly shorter than the 1968 show but will feature more floats.

•

There are 50 floats in this year's parade which has the theme, "children's fantasy".

Oscar Peterson, Canada's internationally-known jazz pianist, is honorary parade marshal.

He is also the featured performer at the Jaycee fair which opens Monday immediately after the parade.

Prior to the parade, which starts from the Mayfair Shopping Centre at 10 a.m., spectators along the Douglas Street route will be entertained by square dancers.

A royal salute will be fired by the 5th B.C. Field Battery at 12 noon.

Saturday and Sunday, bands from Washington State high schools and square dancers will entertain at hospitals and parks.

Symphonic orchestras and choirs from Seattle high schools will perform Saturday and Sunday afternoons at 3 p.m. at the Cameron Bandshell in Beacon Hill Park.

The Shorecrest Highlanders band and highland dancers from Seattle will entertain at 4 p.m. Saturday in front of the parliament buildings.

Square dancers take over Saturday evening at St. Paul's Church Hall in Esquimalt and at Royal Oak Hall.

•

Sunday at 10 a.m. you can choose between an open twirling competition at Esquimalt Jubilee Hall and a junior horse show at the Victoria Riding Academy.

The 5th B.C. Field Battery will present a band concert Sunday at 2:30 at Heritage Court in the provincial museum complex.

Monday there's a senior horse show at the academy, a variety show in Beacon Hill Park beginning at 2:30 p.m. and Victoria Motorcycle Club "scrambles" at the old Colwood race track at 2 p.m.

For bowling enthusiasts there's a 10-pin "tournament of champions" at the Mayfair bowling lanes Monday.

The Jaycee Fair will be officially opened Monday at 8 p.m. by the provincial trade and commerce minister, Waldo Skillings.

The fair will feature a nightly Miss Victoria pageant culminating in the crowning of Miss Victoria, 1970 on May 24.

St. Joseph's Denies Move To McKenzie

St. Joseph's Hospital officials denied this morning that they were contemplating building a new acute care hospital on McKenzie Avenue.

"We have already announced our intention, after a great deal of thought and deliberation, to remain where we are if it is at all feasible to do so," said Dr. Alex Wood, chairman of the hospital board.

He was commenting on reports that hospital administrator Dr. E. C. Q. Van Tilburg had indicated that a McKenzie Avenue site was being considered as an alternate site for the new acute care facility.

'GOOD SPOT'

Dr. Van Tilburg told the hospital's women's auxiliary Tuesday the area around Swan Lake on McKenzie would be a good spot for a hospital.

He also told the group that the proposed St. Ann's Academy site presented many drawbacks including lack of solid foundations.

Dr. Wood said he hadn't read the report on Van Tilnurg's statement so was unable to comment on the content.

"But the policy of the board is to remain where we are," he said.

The McKenzie Avenue site was first mentioned as the new home for St. Joseph's about a year ago. It has since been recommended as a new hospital site by Dr. Harvey Agnew, St. Joseph's consultant on hospital matters.

But a few weeks ago the hospital board rejected their consultant's advice and settled for the St. Ann's Academy site.

On April 28 they received a grant from the Regional Hospital District Board to conduct feasibility studies, $600 of which will go to Agnew as the prime consultant.

To this time no price has been set for the purchase of the St. Ann's site, but the rumored figure is around $2 million.

Short View Of Other Half

Three teen-age girls who ran away to Victoria to "see how the other half lives," as one policeman said, were returned to their Port Angeles homes aboard the ferry MV Coho this morning.

They arrived Tuesday morning and were picked up by Victoria police, apparently after a request for help was received from distraught parents.

The girls, the youngest of whom was 14, spent the night in the juvenile detention home, and this morning one of their parents arrived to escort them home. City police, as a courtesy, drove the party to the Black Ball Ferries terminal on Wharf Street.

Elk Lake Phase-Out For Water

Pipeline From Sooke To Serve Peninsula

By ROGER STONEBANKS

The Greater Victoria Water District plans to run a pipeline up the Saanich Peninsula in 1973 or 1974.

The information was given this morning by water district commissioner Ron Upward following concern expressed at the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health Tuesday about the domestic water supply now drawn from Elk Lake.

The water district's pipeline, when it is built, will bring water from the Sooke watershed area.

Upward said construction of the pipeline will depend on the cost of borrowing money at the time plus financial agreement with Central Saanich and North Saanich.

$3 MILLION

The pipeline would cost about $3 million, although this cost will go up as the years go by. Most of the right-of-way for the line has been acquired.

Senior medical health officer Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread said Tuesday the health board has been keeping "a close eye" on the Elk Lake water supply for a number of years. The water is drawn from the northwest side and is filtered and chlorinated.

He noted that Saanich municipality has a bylaw prohibiting the use of this part of the lake by boats or for recreational purposes but it is difficult to control.

ANOTHER SOURCE

The increasing use of other parts of the lake for recreational use plus the peninsula's dependence on the lake for domestic water means "we are coming to the point where we need another water supply."

He suggested the water board be asked to take "urgent action" to provide a new supply "and the sooner this is done the better. Sometime we may have a situation where we may have to require people to boil their warer."

Health inspector Laurel Benham said if the water board implements the new pipeline "then increasing recreation will not be deleterious. But if this is to be delayed for many years, then outboard-inboard motor boats should be looked at because gas motors have gas and oil trails."

COULD BE PROBLEM

He said this isn't a problem now, but could become one.

Health board member and North Saanich Ald. Trevor Davis was told by Dr. Whitbread there have been no tests to see if there are hydrocarbons after the filters on the present water supply.

"We should see if there is a problem before we try and cure it," he said.

The question arose from the Deep Cove Waterworks District which expressed concern over Saanich proposals to develop Elk Lake as a recreational playground.

It asked that no action be taken that will lead to pollution. It also noted that the present water supply is not "ideal" but is the only one available.

EXPAND RECREATTION

Saanich Ald. Leslie Passmore said expansion of recreational facilities would go ahead if it did not mean contamination of the lake as a water supply.

"No one wants pollution," he said.

The health board agreed to pass on Benham's comments to Ald. William Noel, chairman of Saanich's parks and outdoor recreation committee which is discussing expansion of recreation facilities, and to forward the views expressed generally to the water board and other affected bodies.

Certificates Better For Tested Vehicles

The proprietor of a local auto body shop wants the provincial government to issue certificates rather than stickers to all vehicles which have passed the safety inspection at the motor vehicle testing station.

Under present policy, all vehicles which successfully pass through the testing station have a confirmatory sticker fastened to the lower right hand corner of their windshields.

Peter Albers, co-owner of Belmont Collision, feels that the stickers present some difficulty to a number of drivers. He replaces a minimum of twenty windshields a month in his shop and says tshat "it is absolultely impossible to transfer the sticker from the old to the new glass."

REPEAT VISIT

And unless the owner has retained his check card from the station, he must find both a dollar and a half plus the necessary time for a repeat inspection. This is the only way to obtain duplicate sticker without the original punch card.

Albers suggests that certificates rather than stickers would be more satisfactory. The cards would be carried with the vehicle registration and insurance card.

He intends to submit his proposal in a letter to the attorney-general.

A new car and parts dealer said that his firm replaces "possibly eight to ten windshileds" a month although the figures vary considerably. Another dealer thought his firm might "average four" replacements monthly. He did add that it is the policy of his firm to leave the corner of the old windshild with the stick in the car. This section can be presented to the inspection station for a new sticker valid until January.

NEW COMMANDER of Canadian Forces Base Comox, Colonel Grant H. Nichols will take charge from Colonel K. C. Lett in July. The former Commander will be posted to the National Defence College, Kingston, Ont. Colonel Nichols, a native of Sarnia, Ont., is a former fighter pilot and was awarded the United States Air Medal for his actions as a flight commander with the 5th United States Air Force in Korea. He has been at Mobile Command headquarters, Canadian Forces Base St. Hubert, since May, 1967, when he was promoted to his present rank.
